A postcard of Old Main from the early 1900s. Old Main was the first permanent building and is the oldest building still standing on campus. The exterior was finished in 1875, and it was named University Hall in 1895. By the 20th century, the building had become known as Old Main. The U of A Board of Trustees officially renamed the building Old Main in 1991.

An eclipse has not been fully visible since 1918 but on the first day of the fall semester, Aug. 21, the campus experienced a 90.6 percent coverage at 1:13 p.m. UAPD estimated about 700 students in attendance at the union courtyard to watch the phenomenon.

In preparation for the event, the Pat Walker Health Center gave out 1,250 pairs of solar eclipse glasses at the American Student Government Welcome Back BBQ. The glasses were specially designed to protect people's eyes while looking at the eclipse.

"We simply wanted to provide a nice incentive to come to the BBQ, which clearly worked based on the numbers of people who showed up," Zac Brown, assistant director of communications for the Pat Walker Health Center, said.

The health center quickly ran out of the glasses, which were intended as a generous giveaway for the barbeque. While they wished they could have had enough for everyone, they felt they were not responsible for providing everyone with the glasses, Brown said.

Austin Woodward, a sophomore philosophy major, was waiting in line for the glasses when they ran out. While he did not have any glasses, he said he was still going to look.

"I'm going to glance at [the eclipse] and when I stop seeing, I'll stop," Woodward said.

Students and faculty without glasses were left to their own devices to make eclipse-viewing gadgets. Some students used cereal boxes, aluminum foil and paper plates to see the shadow the eclipse cast and watched the different phases of the eclipse on the ground instead of in the sky. Trees and other items around campus also cast shadows reflecting the stages of the eclipse.

Austin Wahl, a sophomore mechanical engineering major, said she had four of her classes canceled because of the eclipse.

"HOW OFTEN DO WE GET TO SEE THIS? IT'S A PHENOMENON."

Jama Grove, a graduate student in the history department, came prepared to view the eclipse with a pinhole projector made out of a cereal box because she did not think she would get any glasses. To use the device, she faced away from the sun and looked inside of the cereal box while the sun shone on the aluminum foil with a hole on it. The small hole in the aluminum foil showed the eclipse on the inside of the box, allowing her to see it without the glasses.

IN WITH THE NEW

Union gets sleek design with renovations

DESIGNER | Megan Wilson STORY | Jordan Tyler PHOTOS | Mary Helen Brighton

The Arkansas Student Union Living Room was revitalized last summer to provide students with newer, more comfortable furniture and easier access to tech support and computer lab amenities, such as printing and more personalized desktops.

The renovations started spring 2017 and continued into the fall semester, but were largely completed before the first day of classes. The computer lab, Help Desk, Information Center, and stairwell all underwent reconstructions, and new furniture was installed in the Union Living Room. The project had three main components: the computer lab, the living room furniture, and the stairwell.

The idea for the renovations originated when leaders in the Information Technology (IT) Services department realized how beneficial a central Help Desk location could be for students and faculty seeking tech support. They approached Union leadership and Facilities Management with these ideas, who immediately jumped on board to collaboratively create a cohesive and energizing environment.

"From what I gather, the Union leadership charge is the same as ours – ensuring convenient student access to services that will help bolster their educational experience," said Paige Francis, associate chief information officer for IT Services. "We're hoping to drive a culture of excitement surrounding innovation."

The Union took this opportunity to optimize the space with the new furniture and a set of long study tables. They also redesigned the Information Center and the stairwell leading up to the sixth floor to increase visibility.

"It was time to do something the students would see and benefit from very obviously, and this was the right opportunity for that," said Union Director Rob Stagni.

Ethan Washispack, junior supply chain management major, said the renovations made the space feel much more inviting and Arkansas-themed.

"I remember before they just had a bunch of random furniture in here," said Washispack. "It just looked really cluttered."

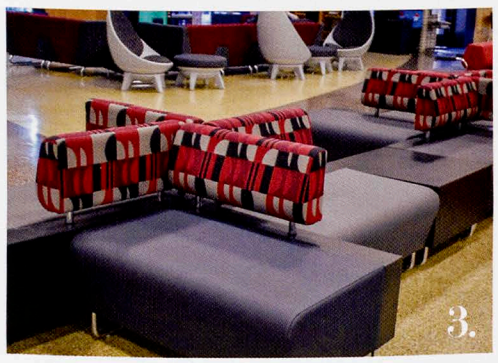

Aside from brand new furniture, the seating capacity in the Living Room was nearly doubled and the number of outlets was also increased. A group of lockers was added in front of the Information Center, designed to give students a way to securely charge their phones on campus.

"So far my expectations have been blown away," said Director Stagni. "It's pretty packed down there. I've been very happy, and I hope the students have been happy too.

Renovations to the first floor of Kimpel Hall, home to the School of Journalism and Strategic Media and Student Media, began summer 2017 and continued throughout the school year, wrapping up by fall 2018 with the completion of the rest of the first floor and the Student Media Center on the west side of the building.

As of fall 2017, the back end of the first floor of Kimpel was revamped with straighter hallways, newer classrooms, more offices for journalism faculty, and private studios for students. Over the course of the year, the Student Media Center transformed the small courtyard into a media studio and central hub for all student media organizations.

Gerald Jordan, associate journalism professor and emeritus, has taught at the university for over 22 years and said he has seen the first floor of Kimpel go through a number of changes. He said he was glad for the renovations and looks forward to the ways in which the Student Media Center will bring the journalism school together and increase its presence on campus.

Jordan said the improved lighting was one of the greatest improvements, because it "takes away from the whole idea of it being a dank basement." He also said renovations provided a space where students could build a sense of camaraderie.

Along with these renovations came a name change for the journalism program from the Walter J. Lemke Department of Journalism to the School of Journalism and Strategic Media. This, along with the idea for a Student Media Center, was proposed and accomplished by Larry Foley, chair of the School of Journalism and Student Media, with the help of funding from Sue Walk Burnett, a distinguished alumnae of this very journalism program.

According to Foley, the department was long due for a name change to place it among the ranks of other highly accredited journalism programs at colleges across the nation. In fact, when researching the potential of a name change, Foley said he realized the department already qualified as a school "in everything but name."

"There is something in a name, and our name needed to be changed to reflect who we have grown to become," Foley said.

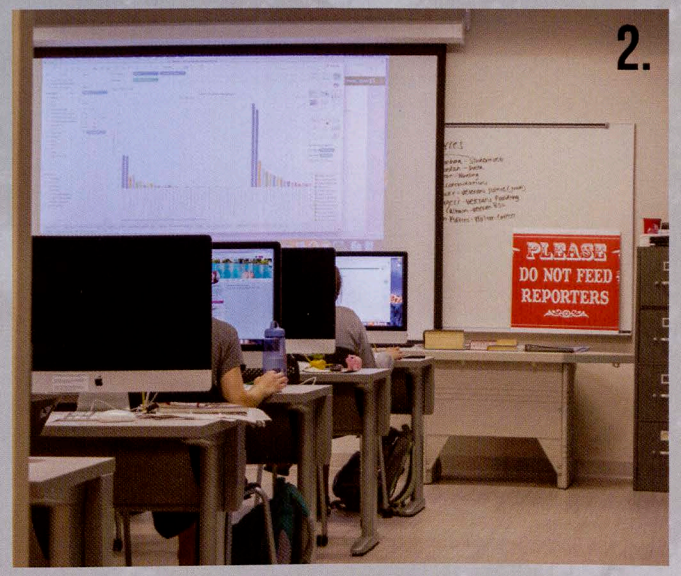

Alex Nicoll, editor-in-chief of The Arkansas Traveler, said he thought the renovations were crucial for Student Media's visibility on campus and ability to collaborate.

"I remember the past couple of years we called it 'the dungeon' as a joke," Nicoll said. He added, "I've had a lot of people come and talk to me about how fresh and amazing this whole place is."

Foley agreed with Nicoll by saying, "Right now, we're hidden off in the basement where nobody evens knows we exist. That's not going to be the case anymore."

1000 FEET OF FUN

DESIGNER |Hannah Rainer STORY | Caitlin Lane PHOTOS | Kara Maurer

Dickson Street transformed overnight into one giant slip-and-slide to raise awareness for a local cause. The Dickson Street Slide is an annual fundraiser for Soldier on Service Dogs, a local non-profit that trains service dogs to accompany veterans with post-traumatic stress disorder, as well as other traumatic brain injuries acquired on duty, at no cost to veterans.

The Dickson Street Slide made a splash on Aug. 27 from 10 a.m. to 8 p.m., accompanied by various food trucks and other assorted vendors. The slide itself was over 1,000 feet of fun for children and adults alike. The array of people, the smell of comfort foods and the sight of painted faces brought a nostalgic, carnival feeling to Dickson Street.

"This is a big deal for us and we have a lot of fun while we're out here," Lead Trainer Tiffany Grey said.

Grey has volunteered with Soldier on Service Dogs for over a year now and said there is a lot of preparation that goes into the event because it makes up for 10 percent of the organization's annual income.

"We solely rely on volunteers and fundraisers for our income and to be able to train these dogs," Grey said.

The proceeds of this event greatly impact the non-profit organizations projections and availability to help local Fayetteville Veterans. It was free to the public to attend as spectators, and cost participants $25 for three slides or $40 for unlimited sliding privileges.

"My roommate and I drove by and saw the slide and decided to indulge ourselves with corn dogs, henna tattoos and face painting," Olivia Clayton, sophomore biology major, said. "It looked like so much fun, we couldn't pass up this opportunity!"

Clayton said they enjoyed watching people "wipe out" on the giant slide and ended the day by listening to local musicians. Although Clayton and her roommate had never heard about the event before, she said, "We will definitely be back again to support Soldier on Service Dogs."

Lindsey Gabbard, another local volunteer and puppy-raiser, has helped with the event for a little over a year now and said she loves the cause and has a great time every year. According to Gabbard, anyone can get involved and donate to the cause, and volunteers do not need experience in order to help out.

COMING BACK HOME

DESIGNER | Madison Landry STORY | Caitlin Lane PHOTOS | submitted by Delta Gamma

Delta Gamma had a successful first year back on campus after 20 years. The sorority increased in both size and diversity by welcoming 150 freshman girls into their 2017 pledge class.

Erin Stewart, sophomore and director of GivePulse for Delta Gamma, said her favorite memories were made during work week, which is a preparatory week for chapters before formal recruitment begins.

"Even though we technically were working all week, it wasn't like we were working," Stewart said.

Rachael Greene, senior and Head of New Member Committee, welcomed and supported last year's incoming members.

"The 2017 pledge class is really academically motivated and already very involved with activities, and stay determined in every sense," Greene said.

"We have a really big and diverse group of girls, a bunch of them involved in different things and having different interests," Ali Swanson, director of chapter archives, said in agreement with Greene.

Since their return to campus, the sorority has not slowed down in their pursuit of charity and involvement. Sophomore Catherine Baker said Delta Gamma's involvement with the community is what sets them apart from other greek life organizations on campus.

Delta Gamma's philanthropy, Service for Sight, has provided thousands of people and veterans, both local and non-local, with either glasses or tests to help their vision.

"I really like our philanthropy because since it is vision, that means we get to work with a wide range of people, like little kids and older people," Stewart said.

Stewart also explained Delta Gamma was one of the first sororities to found their own philanthropy. Delta Gamma holds two large fundraising events per year in order to raise awareness for their cause. Their biggest event is a competitive swimming race known as Anchor Splash, where every sorority and fraternity is able to sign up and participate in the race while members of Delta Gamma host, volunteer and coach the sorority and fraternity teams.

"It's more the small things that make up our sisterhood rather than the big events," Greene said. "It's a big part of our chapter in that we are so different and diverse. It's been really fun to see and I think it's really unique from other sororities."

"There's definitely a place for every type of girl within our philanthropy," Stewart agreed.

The groundbreaking ceremony for Delta Gamma's new sorority house on the corner of Arkansas Avenue and Maple Street took place in March, and construction is set for completion by fall 2019.

"I'm really excited, for someone who is never going to get to live in it," Greene said.

Delta Gamma aspires to leave their mark at the University of Arkansas for years to come by creating lasting bonds, memories and friendships.

FRANK BROYLES

Frank Broyles was the head coach for the Arkansas Razorback football team for 19 years and led them to their first and only National Championship in 1964. The Razorbacks were the only team in the country to go 11-0 that season.

The Razorbacks had 14 winning seasons during Broyles' time as head coach, compared to winning six out of the previous 19 seasons. He later helped the Razorbacks move from the Southwest Conference to the Southeast Conference.

Broyles not only helped put the Razorback athletic department on the map, but he also significantly helped the university's academics.

He later became the athletic director and helped with academic campaigns. In the university's first major fundraiser, the Campaign of Books, he raised $2 million to add 100,000 volumes to university libraries. In 2001, he donated another $200,000 to the to buy supplies like scanners and printers.

Broyles was also credited with helping save Old Main in 1985. The landmark building was closed for five years because of safety concerns and looked like it would not receive funding to be renovated and reopened. With Broyles' help, former Chancellor Dan Ferritor was able to raise enough money for the structural renovations and Old Main was reopened, where classes and offices still reside today.

Following the Razorback men's basketball team winning the National Championship in 1994, the athletic department was awarded one million dollars. When Broyles told Ferritor about the prize, Ferritor told him the university could use the money in their scholarship fund. Broyles gladly put the money into the fund instead of using it in the athletic department, saying he wanted U of A academics to be respected just like at any other top school.

Broyles also encouraged athletic department donors to support the efforts to raise the university's academic reputation. Without his help, the university would not have received these donations to make improvements to academics.

Through his campaigning, Broyles helped raise over $1 billion for the university, something which would not have been fundraised if he was not involved, former Vice Chancellor G. David Gearhart said.

Through Broyles' efforts, the University of Arkansas became a premier institution of higher education and athletics.

Broyles was inducted into the College Football Hall of Fame in 1983. He died on Aug. 14, 2017, at the age of 92 from complications of Alzheimer's disease, surrounded by his family in Fayetteville.

THE AFTERMATH OF HARVEY

Floodwaters engulfed entire houses as millions sought shelter in local warehouses, department stores and anywhere dry. Civilians and federal officials alike worked day and night to rescue victims from Hurricane Harvey's devastating damage.

The Category 4 hurricane hit Houston on Aug. 26. From there, the storm moved east across the Texas Coastal Bend and made a second landfall in Louisiana on Aug. 30, according to the Federal Emergency Management Agency. Scott Flanagin, executive director of communications for the Division of Student Affairs, said 353 undergraduate students at the university had a home and family in one of the six counties hit by Harvey. Flanagin said the Dean of Students Office reached out to affected students to offer condolences and resources for bereavement in the time during and after the disaster.

Alex Arsenis, senior supply chain management and marketing major, said his hometown of Manvel was entirely flooded. Luckily, Arsenis said his neighborhood is on a small hill, so the only part of his home that was damaged was the garage.

Houston received just under 52 inches of rain during Hurricane Harvey, according to the National Weather Service.

"To put that into perspective, the city of Fayetteville, in a whole year, gets 42 inches of rain on average," Arsenis explained. "Houston, in the course of a few days, got 52 inches."

The Associated Press reported around 37,000 homes in Southeast Texas were badly damaged, almost 7,000 were destroyed and about 32,000 people sought temporary housing during this time.

Ramsey Minto, senior broadcast journalism major, said she lived in Houston her whole life, just 30 minutes from downtown, before coming to college. Her home is located near Addicks Reservoir, a bayou that overflowed to cause much of the flooding during Hurricane Harvey.

"Every time there is any kind of flooding, my neighborhood would get hit pretty hard by it," Minto said.

Half of Minto's house was underwater, but luckily her family was able to salvage two of her most valuable possessions late one night before the water got too high.

"Everything else in my room is gone," she said.

When her mother went back to the house to evaluate the damage, Minto said, she was overwhelmed by the smell and mold everywhere, as if it had been flooded by "sewage water."

Many local and university organizations joined forces to provide relief for Houston. The Student-Athlete Advisory Committee, Razorback Athletics, Experience Fayetteville and Little Guys Movers hosted Razorback Relief: Operation Houston on Sept. 7 to collect donations such as food, clothing, first aid supplies and dog food.

"I think the hardest thing about this hurricane for people at the University of Arkansas was to watch your city go down like that and not be able to do anything," Arsenis said.

He said he was moved to find out his friends back home offered help to less fortunate victims of the storm.

Minto said although her family lost so much from this disaster, she feels lucky her family had flood insurance, unlike so many Harvey victims.

"You don't really realize how devastating something like that is until it happens to you," Minto said.

"YOU DON'T REALIZE HOW DEVASTATING SOMETHING LIKE THIS IS UNTIL IT HAPPENS TO YOU"

On Aug. 23, 2017, the art department announced a $120 million gift from the Walton Family Charitable Support Foundation to establish the School of Art.

"Now that the art department is a School of Art, it will open so many doors for current and future students," Jeannie Hulen, department chairperson, said. "This endowment helps our program's prestige while we compete with other art schools across the country, so when someone asks a student which art school they are attending they can say the University of Arkansas."

The $120 million endowment had four main goals. The first goal was to provide financial support for students by creating scholarships, travel grants and fellowship opportunities.

"A gift of this magnitude will be life changing for all involved," said Art History Instructor Cindy Wiseman. "Imagine being able to have scholarships available to fund your passion for learning. This will change the lives of so many students."

The second goal focused on outreach and public service through a partnership with Crystal Bridges Museum of American Art, and the third goal was to create more graduate programs in art history, art education and graphic design. The final goal was focused on renovating the historic Fine Arts Center, designed by Edward Durrell Stone and expanding the Fine Arts Library.

"The department has grown through the years and, with this change from the Department of Art to the School of Art, we will see unprecedented growth in the program and the numbers of creatively qualified and intellectually curious graduates that will be important additions to the workforce in Arkansas and beyond," Tom Hapgood, head of the graphic design program, said.

"The School of Art will strive to continue to excel and create new opportunities for current and future students in years to come and work to become one of the top art schools in the country," Hulen said.

KEEPING THE DREAM ALIVE

In 2012, Barack Obama signed the Deferred Action for Childhood Arrivals Program, known as DACA, created to provide legal protection to children who were brought to the United States by undocumented parents. The program specifically applies to children who arrived in the country before they were 16 years old and are currently under the age of 31.

In Fall 2017, President Donald Trump was considering eliminating DACA in an attempt to tighten border control, meaning thousands of people would lose their jobs and, once their work permits expire, must leave the country.

The University of Arkansas Immigration Law Clinic held panels for students who were DACA recipients to help them figure out how to extend their visas and assist them in other ways during that time. The clinic first opened in 2008 and provides legal services to students who need representation with immigration issues, while allowing law students to get hands-on experience.

The clinic held a few panels throughout the year to help students and faculty learn more about DACA and what they can do to help.

Stephanie G. Adams, associate director of academic enrichment for University Housing, said the panels were everything she hoped and that they were informative, educational, engaging and interactive.

Adams also said DACA students should know their resources, such as the Arkansas United Community Coalition.

Chancellor Joseph E. Steinmetz released a statement saying the University of Arkansas supports education for everyone, no matter where they come from, and education for everyone benefits the country as a whole.

Trump tweeted DACA recipients were not at threat of being deported unless they were criminals, involved in criminal activity or members of a gang.

There are about 800,000 people under the protection of DACA. Some are from South Korea and the Philippines, but a large portion are from South America.

Under DACA, these children are protected from immediate deportation as long as they are accepted into the program, but they do not receive legal status. Applicants cannot have a criminal background and must have either a high school diploma, be honorably discharged from the military or still in school. Those accepted into the program can renew their status every two years.

The thunder of bikes roaring to life, the smell of roasted turkey legs and funnel cakes, and huge crowds of leather were all present at Fayetteville's annual Bikes Blues and BBQ.

Bikes Blues and BBQ occurs every September for one weekend, featuring motorcycles of all shapes and kinds, fair food, music and entertainment, and an assortment of pop-up shops along Dickson Street.

"This was my first time going and I'll definitely go again next year," Sophomore Maddie Luman said. "But next time, I'll wear Harley clothing."

Junior Erica Headley said walking around with her friends and visiting the shops was her favorite part of the event.

"The atmosphere every year is so fun with all the bikes and carnival type tents they set up," Headley said.

Because the event is free and open to the public, visitors came from different states such as Texas and Oklahoma.

"It was really neat seeing all the people from all different areas coming in and showing off their bikes," Luman said.

One of the most popular staples at Bikes Blues and BBQ were the funnel cakes and turkey legs, Luman and Headley agreed.

"Almost everyone there had a turkey leg, and they looked so good," Luman said.

Sophomore Ellis Hairston had a less enthusiastic take on the event, considering the traffic it caused for Fayetteville residents.

"Every year around the time of Bikes Blues and BBQ, I leave town or try to stay away from local traffic because of all the bikes," Hairston said.

But Fayetteville Police Department worked hard to make sure traffic ran as smoothly and safely as possible.

"I could really tell that traffic was not as bad this year and I heard they have really worked on keeping everyone safe," Luman said.

A YEAR OF HELLOS, A YEAR OF GOODBYES

SEASON RECAP

RECAP | Antonio Tijanero DESIGN | Hannah Rainer & Madison Landry

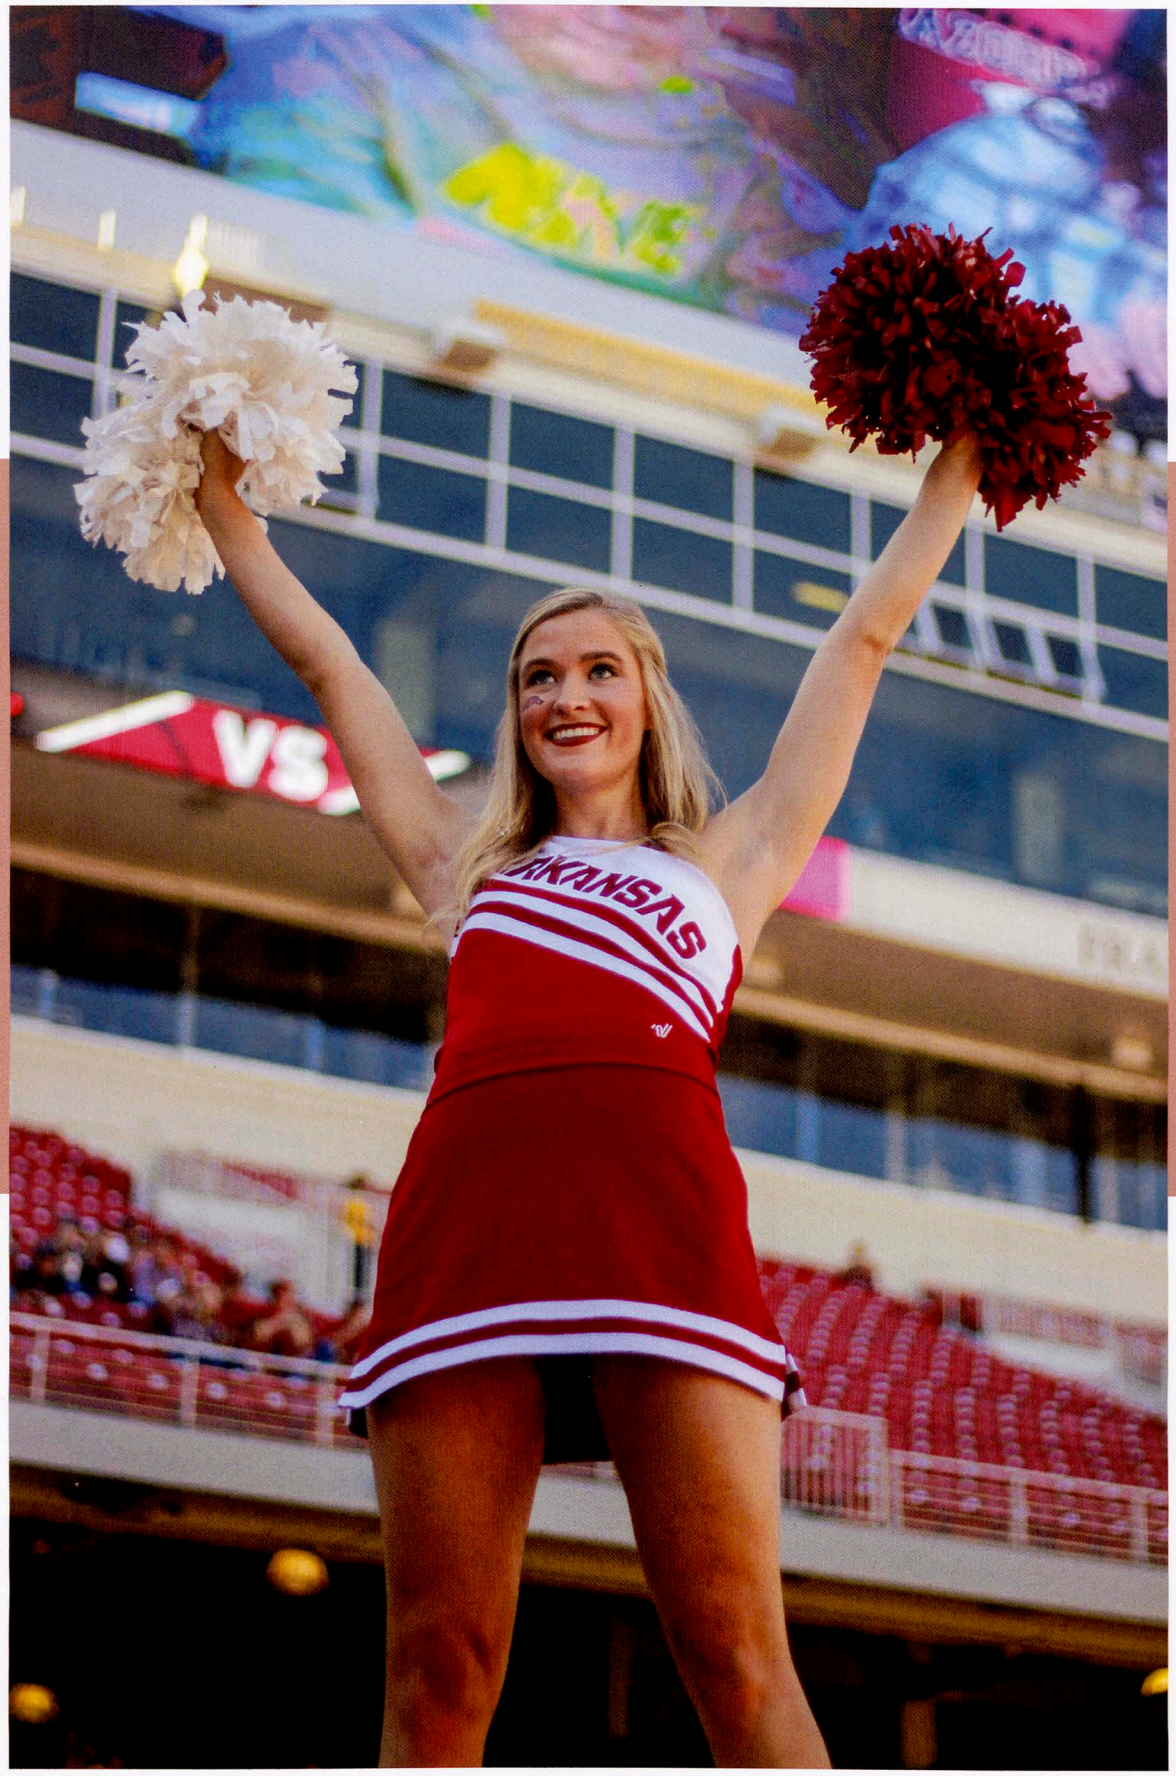

It was a year of hellos, a year of goodbyes, a year of downs and not enough ups for the Arkansas Razorback football team in its 2017 season. Head coach Bret Bielema entered the year looking to finally break through the glass ceiling and return the Razorbacks to the top of the Southeastern Conference. A 49-7 routing of Florida A&M was an expected, but still welcoming, start to the season, but the wheels fell off the Bielema bus quickly after that. The Hogs went on to grind out just two more nonconference wins against New Mexico State and Coastal Carolina and added a single conference win against Ole Miss, finishing with a 4-8 overall record and a 1-7 conference record.

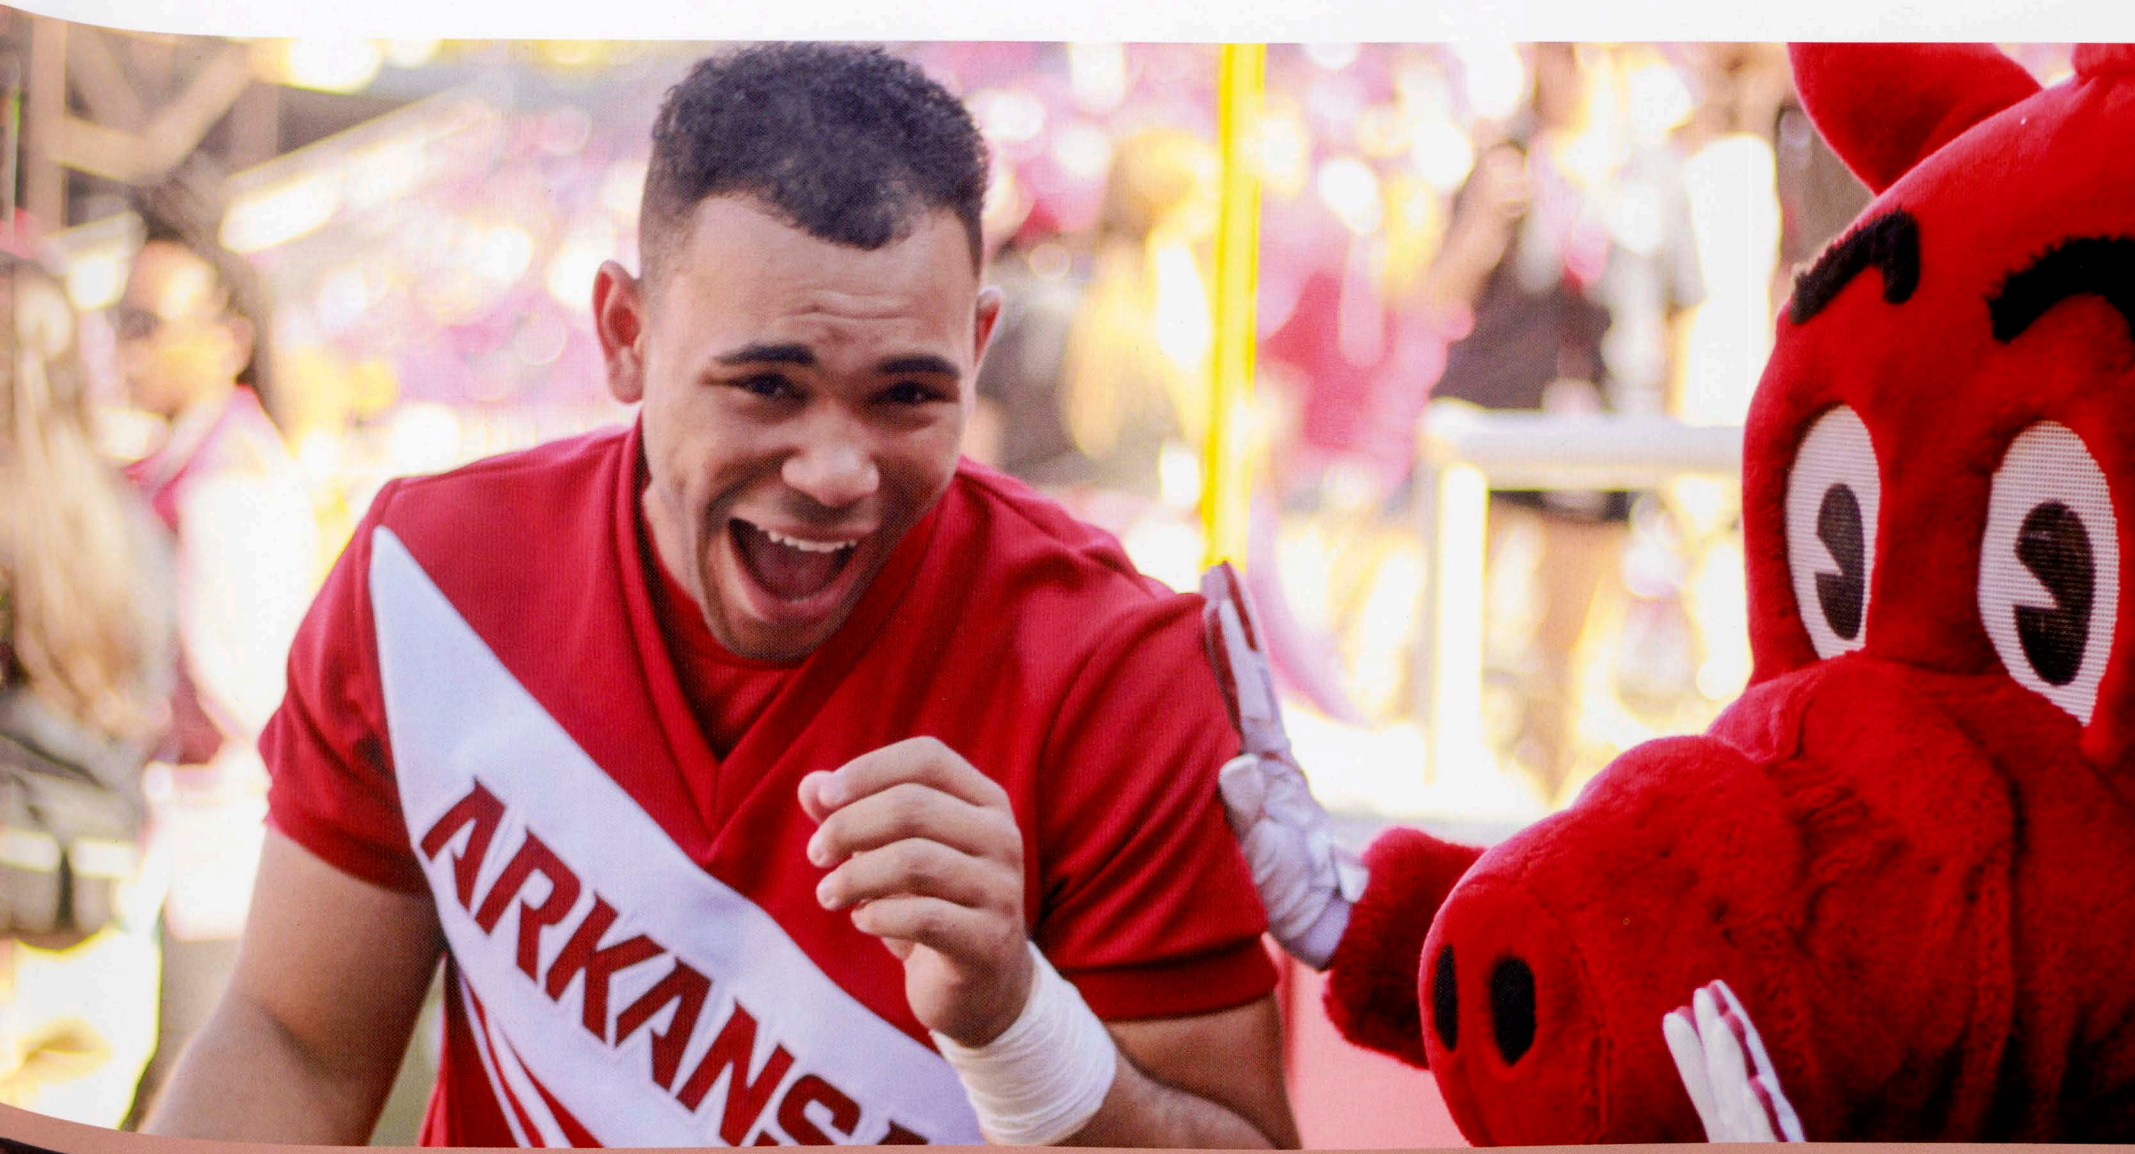

The Hogs would give up both the Golden Boot to LSU and the Battle Line trophy to Missouri, and lose the annual AT&T Stadium-hosted matchup against Texas A&M. If that was not bad enough for Razorback fans, they also dealt with the injury bug plaguing the roster. The Hogs lost star player after star player, beginning with junior cornerback Ryan Pulley and ending with three seniors, wide receiver Jared Cornelius, quarterback Austin Allen and center Frank Ragnow.

The tumultuous season came to an end in a way most expected, with Head Coach Bret Bielema's four-year Razorback coaching career coming to an end. Athletic Director Jeff Long was also let go, another casualty in the madness that was the 2017 football season. Now, with their feet on the ground and their eyes toward the future, Arkansas football will have a new Head Hog in charge, Chad Morris, for the 2018 season.

Every year, students and locals come together to support the University of Arkansas' annual Homecoming celebrations. The theme for 2017, "All Roads Lead Home to the Hill," inspired many alumni to attend and show pride for their alma mater.

The university sponsored events from Oct. 28 to Nov. 4 to encourage students to get involved within the community. Activities included a Fall Festival put on by the Student Alumni Association, Hog Wild Tailgate and a student performance of "Rocky Horror Picture Show."

Sophomore biology major Sarah Hendrickson said this was her first time being directly involved with the homecoming parade.

"I had so much fun being with my sorority sisters and passing out candy to little kids and cheering during the homecoming parade," Hendrickson said.

Samantha Barnett, junior social work major, also joined in the student-run activities before homecoming.

"I loved getting to drive by all the different sorority houses and seeing their homecoming decorations and banners," Barnett said.

Brandon Moritz and Beau Broyles were crowned as Homecoming king and queen. Moritz, a senior biomedical engineering major, represented Beta Upsilon Chi fraternity, and Broyles, a senior apparel merchandising and product development major, represented Chi Omega sorority. Both Moritz and Broyles were acknowledged at the Pep Rally and crowned at the football game against Coastal Carolina.

When the 2017-18 season began, the men's basketball team quickly began turning heads with their eccentric style of play and stars on the court. With the one-two punch of Jaylen Barford and Daryl Macon paired with a future NBA first-round pick, Daniel Gafford, records were broken, milestones were met, highlight reels were made and comparisons to the 1994 National Championship team soon arose. Early results enamored fans in a way they have not been in years, but soon those high hopes came back down to earth.

After starting the conference season with four losses in six games, a spark was needed to bring the Hogs back to life. They provided, and went on to finish strong with a 10-8 conference record and a run to the semifinals in the Southeastern Conference Tournament. March rolled around and many fans hoped the team would go far in the NCAA Tournament, but those hopes were crushed by an inspired, lower-seeded Butler team that gave the Hogs a first-round exit. That was that. A season that began on cloud nine had abruptly ended. Six seniors left the program at the end of the season and two more players transferred. Razorback fans will see many new faces take the court next fall, and it is up to longtime coach Mike Anderson to prepare a team with no seniors to compete in a conference coming off of, arguably, its most competitive season ever in basketball.

A BRIGHT FUTURE

RECAP | Antonio Tijanero DESIGN | Madison Landry PHOTOS | Mary Helen Brighton

The 2016-17 season was full of lows and few highs for the Razorback women's basketball team. Disappointments, losses and controversy rattled a team that went on to finish dead last in the Southeastern Conference. With a conference record of 2-14, a complete rebuild was in order. Enter Mike Neighbors, a Greenwood, Arkansas, native who returned to his home state with one goal in mind for this team: to not finish last.

Arkansas began its 2017-18 campaign with an exceptional 10-4 nonconference record, but the wheels fell off that bus as soon as conference season began. It was one riddled with losing streaks, blowouts and valiant efforts that fell short. Still, the players kept their heads up and celebrated the small victories. The preseason polls picked the team to finish last yet again, but the Hogs proved them wrong by finishing twelfth out of 14 teams. No matter how many other losses the team suffered, that feat was a win for the Hogs. Under the new coaching staff, players like graduate guard Devin Cosper, junior guard Malica Monk and sophomore forward Kiara Williams shined in a team competing in one of the best women's basketball conferences in the country.

The year may have ended with a less-than-stellar 13-18 record, but the team as a whole improved. It was not about the results this season, and fans should not dwell on them or the team's past. It's time for fans to look toward the future of this team, and it's a bright one. A team rebuild is a slow and steady process, but patience is a virtue.

NEW PLAYING FIELD

DESIGNER | Megan Wilson STORY | Leah Nelson PHOTOS | Frances Wagnon

Throughout the years of Razorback football, the stadium has seen many different looks and had many different names.

In 1901, the Razorbacks' first stadium could seat 300 people and stood where Mullins Library and the Fine Arts Center now stands. In 1938, the stadium was known as University Stadium and increased its maximum capacity to 13,500 people. The expansion was funded by the Works Progress Administration, which was started as a result of the New Deal after the Great Depression.

After a new athletic director, James Barnhill, arrived on campus in 1947, another expansion added 2,500 seats to the stadium. Over the next 20 years, the stadium was improved with a turf field and the number of seats grew again to 42,678. The next major expansion came in 1986, bringing the maximum capacity of the stadium to 50,000 people.

The last major renovation was completed in 2000 and enclosed the south end zone, adding another 7,300 seats. The project, promoted by Frank Broyles, cost about $110 million, including a $20 million donation from the Donald W. Reynolds Foundation, and was necessary for the Razorbacks to compete in the Southeastern Conference.

By the end of this renovation, the stadium had grown from 51,000 to 72,000 seats, a 21,000 seat increase. The expansion and renovation was said to have made the University of Arkansas one of the finest football stadiums in the nation.

When the upper deck in the south end zone was added, the stadium capacity was once again increased, this time by 8,000 seats.

The Donald W. Reynolds stadium was commissioned for another expansion in 2016 to add approximately 4,800 seats to the north side of the stadium, costing about $110 million. The new addition will include 38 new suites, all of which are already sold. This continues a tradition of the suites being sold out since the renovation in 2000.

Thanks to the latest renovations, two new club sections were added to the stadium, named the Touchdown Club and the 64 Club. In addition, there will be some club seats with an all-you-can-eat food area within close proximity to the field. Another jumbotron on the south end of the stadium was also added.

The latest version of the Donald W. Reynolds football stadium is set to be completed by fall of 2018.

SUPPORT FOR STUDENTS

FROM NATIONAL STUTTERING ASSOCIATION

DESIGNER | Bryan Murren STORY | Caitlin Lane PHOTOS | Connor Perkins

The Fayetteville chapter of the National Stuttering Association began holding meetings Oct. 4 to provide support to students with speech impediments. The organization was founded by the university's Speech and Hearing Clinic, which has provided services to students since 1960. Both students and local residents were encouraged to attend monthly support group meetings.

The National Stuttering Association started when Alyssa Parker, a staff member in the Department of Rehabilitation, Human Resources and Communication Disorders, was asked by her director to put the group together.

"My director was getting requests for the support group and, sure enough, when I looked it up, the closest group was in Maumelle," Parker said.

The group was created in order to give people who struggle with stuttering a place to communicate and sympathize with each other. The main goal of the Fayetteville chapter is to provide information about stuttering, spread public awareness, and operate as a support group.

"Occasionally, some trained speech therapists will join the meetings to listen in and offer help if needed or requested by the participants," Parker said.

According to their website, the Speech and Hearing Clinic provides participants with an opportunity to talk about their fears, anxieties and achievements, and practice methods to control stuttering in a safe and supportive environment. The clinic also assists members of the group achieve their personal goals.

The Speech and Hearing Clinic also offers language, hearing and speech services, such as therapy, treatment and diagnosis for hearing and language disorders.

Every semester, students enrolled in the integrated marketing communications course offered by the Sam M. Walton College of Business work together to rebrand a local business. These students worked with Campus Concierge, a tutoring service run by Anna Morrison, in the fall to develop a new brand: Do College Better.

The course is taught by Anne Velliquette, a clinical assistant professor in the Department of Marketing.

"I try to choose companies that choose these students as their target market so that they have vested interests in this company," Velliquette said.

Campus Concierge had been around for roughly five years, and Morrison said she had been looking to change the name of her business for a few years. Through a mutual friend, Morrison was able to meet Velliquette and finally rebrand t business with the help of university students.

"I really was so excited to do this is because these students a our niche environment," Morrison said.

Morrison was happy to work with the students in Velliquett marketing class. In fact, she was thrilled with the results th she would recommend them to other local businesses seekin help with rebranding.

"It not only gives back to the community, but as well as the students," Morrison said.

A LASTING MEMORY

New addition to Old Main Lawn honors World War I soldiers

DESIGNER | Hannah Rainer STORY | Leah Nelson PHOTOS | Christopher Perkins

In November, the University of Arkansas approved the planting of a willow oak tree on Old Main lawn as a living memorial to Arkansans who served in World War I.

Each county in the state of Arkansas planned to plant a tree for the 100th anniversary of World War I. The willow oak is the only one in Washington county, but one of 75 across the state.

Peter MacKeith, dean of the Fay Jones School of Architecture and Design, learned about the project to create a memorial in each county and wanted the university to be a part of it. He worked with the Arkansas Forestry Commission and Facilities Management on campus to get the memorial approved.

"Through the organizational effort of the Arkansas World War I Commemoration Commission and the generosity of the Arkansas Forestry Association, we're able to plant this tree in the Old Main Arboretum in honor of those Arkansas citizens, and in particular those citizens of Washington County and the university, who gave their service to the nation in the First World War, in many cases giving their lives to the cause of world peace," MacKeith said.

According to the Arkansas World War I Centennial, 71,862 Arkansans served in the war and 2,183 of them gave their lives. The memorial will remind students, faculty and visitors about World War I and the price many paid to protect their country.

"It's an opportunity to remind and educate people about World War I, to spark interest in them and remind them about the Arkansas connection," Media Relations Manager Steve Voorhies said. "People have forgotten a lot about World War I and the number of Arkansans who fought in World War I, and the number who died in their service has largely been forgotten."

Aside from the local memorial, a national effort to build a World War I memorial in Washington D.C. also emerged, a project for which Joe Weishaar, alumnus of the Fay Jones School of Architecture and Design, plans to work on the design team.

MAIN HILL MEDIA

DESIGNER | Hannah Rainer STORY | Leah Nelson PHOTOS | Submitted by Main Hill Media

Main Hill Media, the newest Student Media platform, made its way on to campus during the spring semester as the first student-run advertising agency at the University of Arkansas to work with businesses and organizations both on and off campus.

The idea for Main Hill Media came from a seminar advertising and public relations class where a group of students created an advertising agency they called Red Hill Strategic Media. In the following semester, the agency was rebranded and became Main Hill Media.

Director Emily Todd said her team has big plans to be widely known across campus and to create a good relationship with the student body.

"As a team who defined ourselves as 'students reaching students,' we would be the first ever student agency that decides to take a different, more innovative approach to things," Todd said.

In spring 2018, Todd said the Main Hill Media staff planned to meet with Ella's to discuss rebranding the restaurant, which can be found inside the Inn at Carnall hall on campus.

This agency gives students the opportunity to gain hands on experience with advertising and provides them with a creative outlet in which they can learn and apply their skills, said Shane White, director of photography.

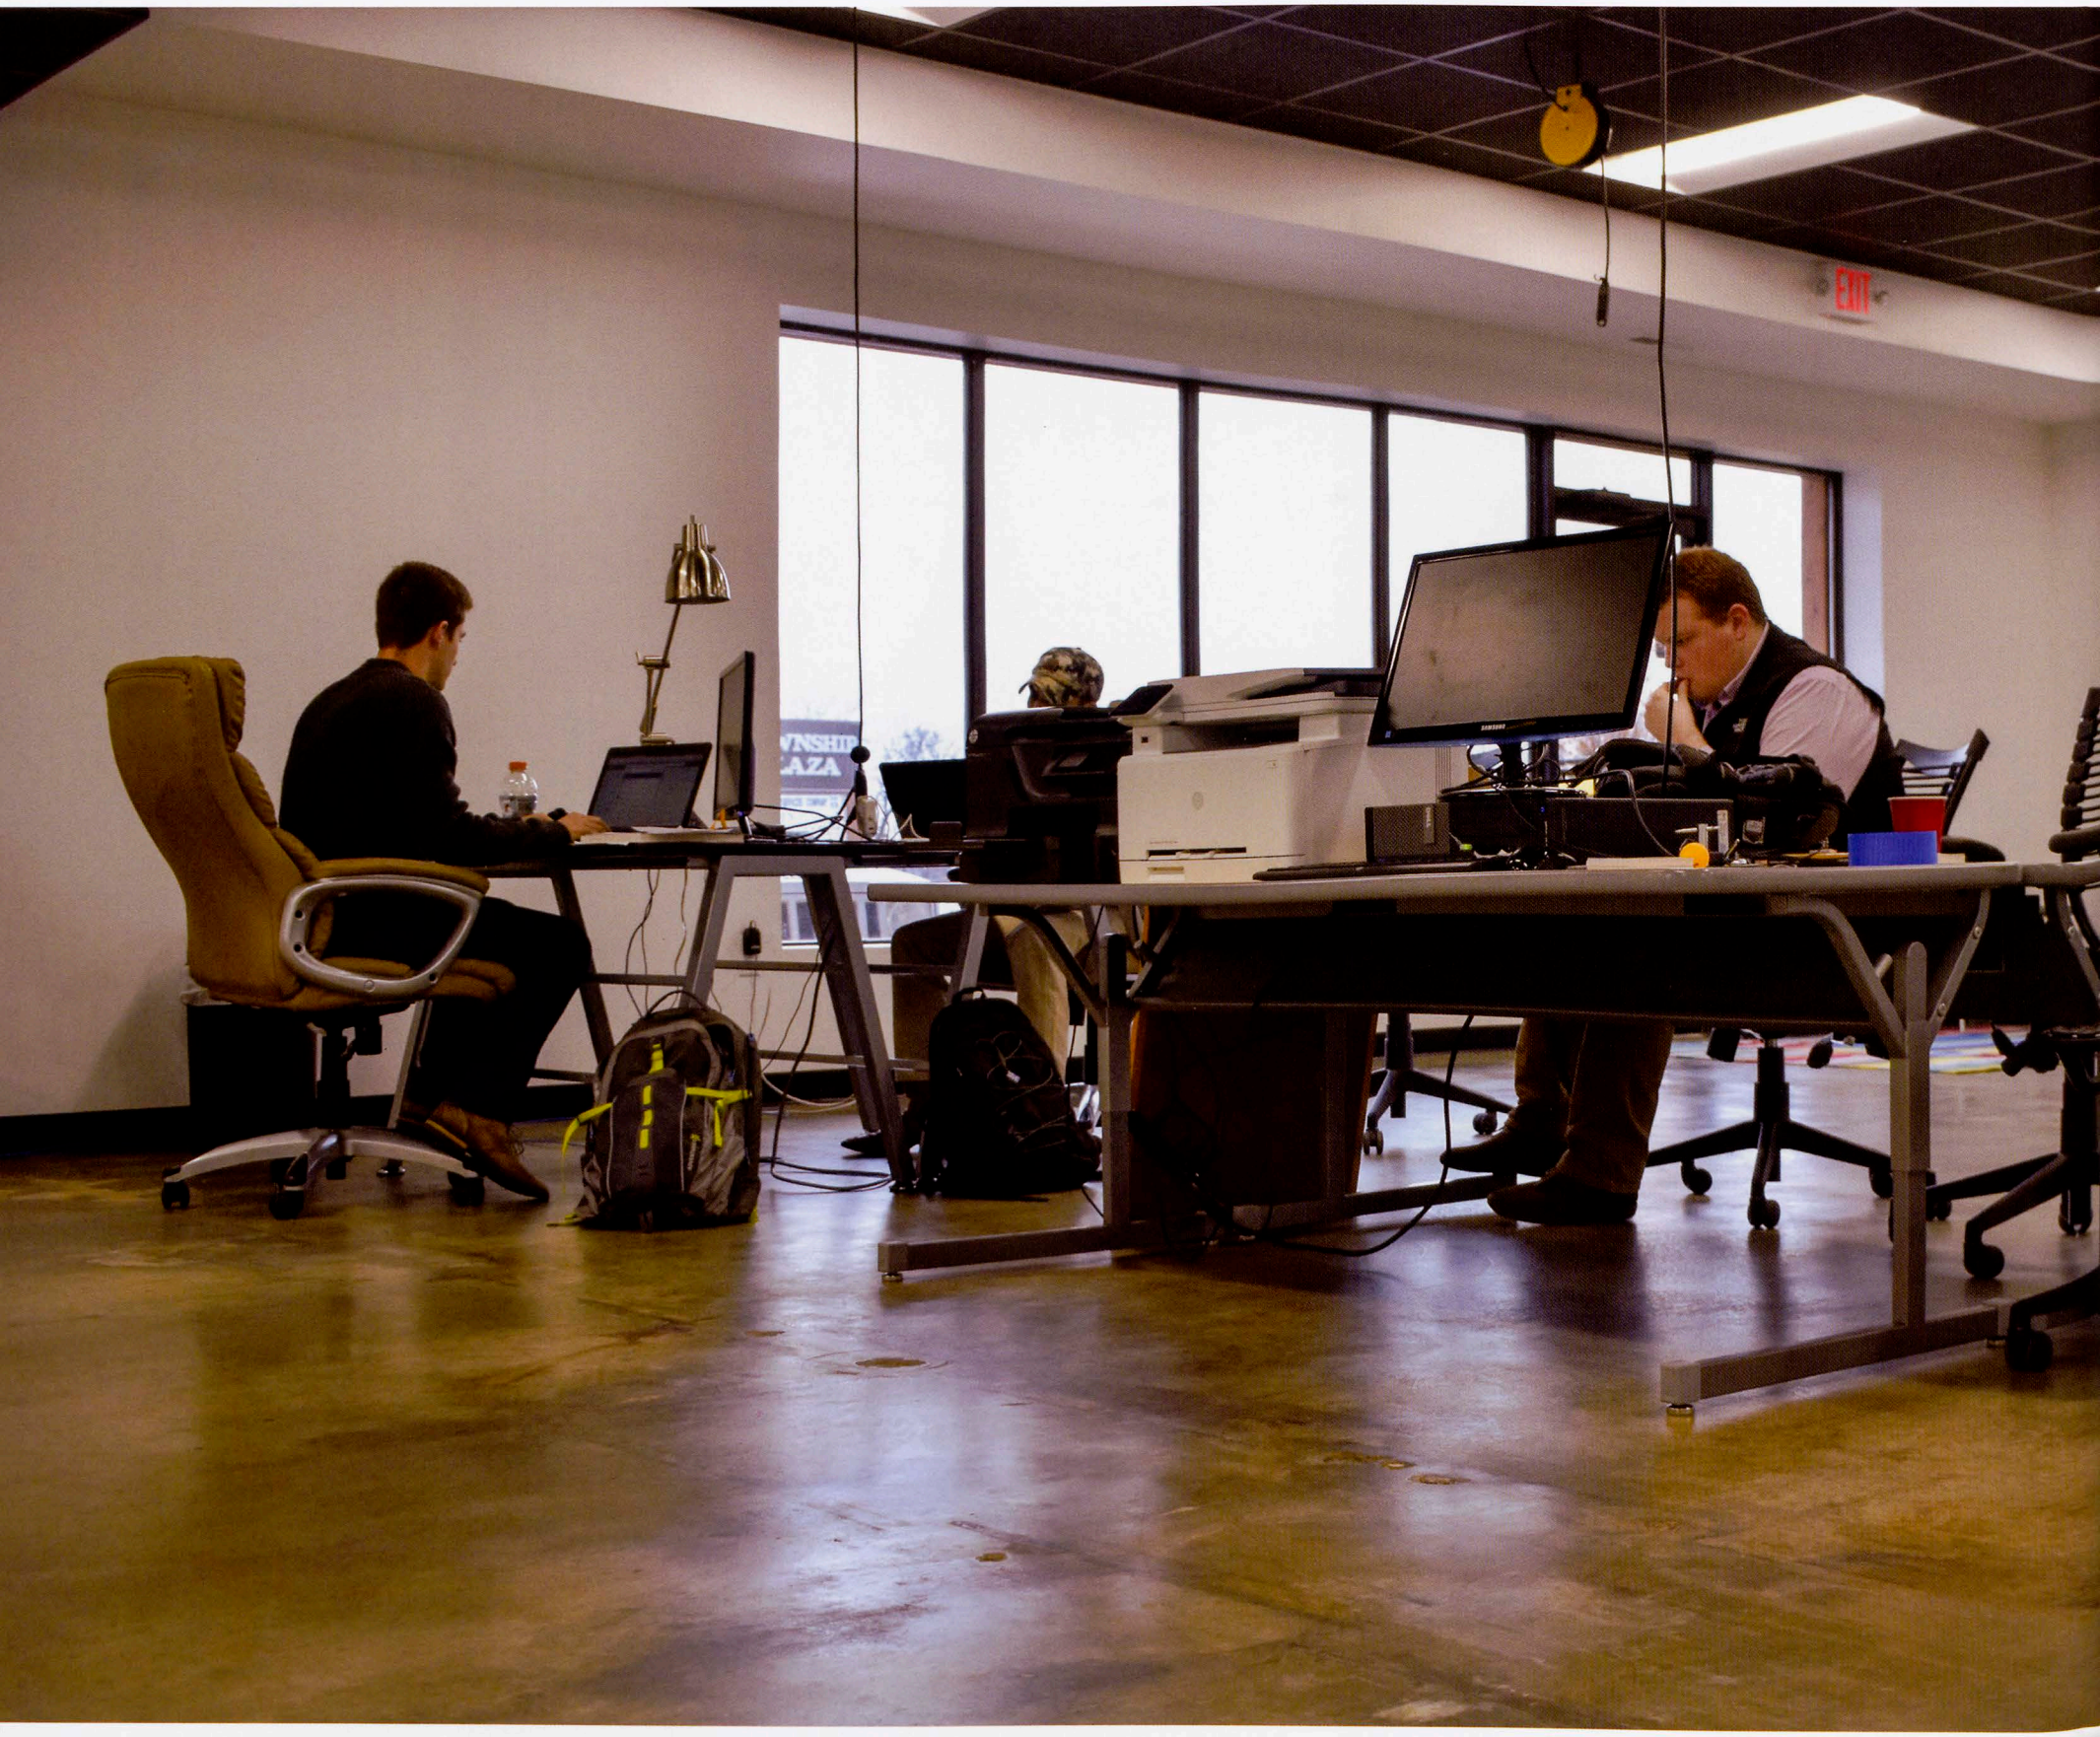

"We have come up with some out of the box, creative ideas that most companies would never go for," Creative Director Trystan Haney said. "It has taught me that leaving the comfort zone of normal is the best way to succeed and stand out as an agency and as an individual."

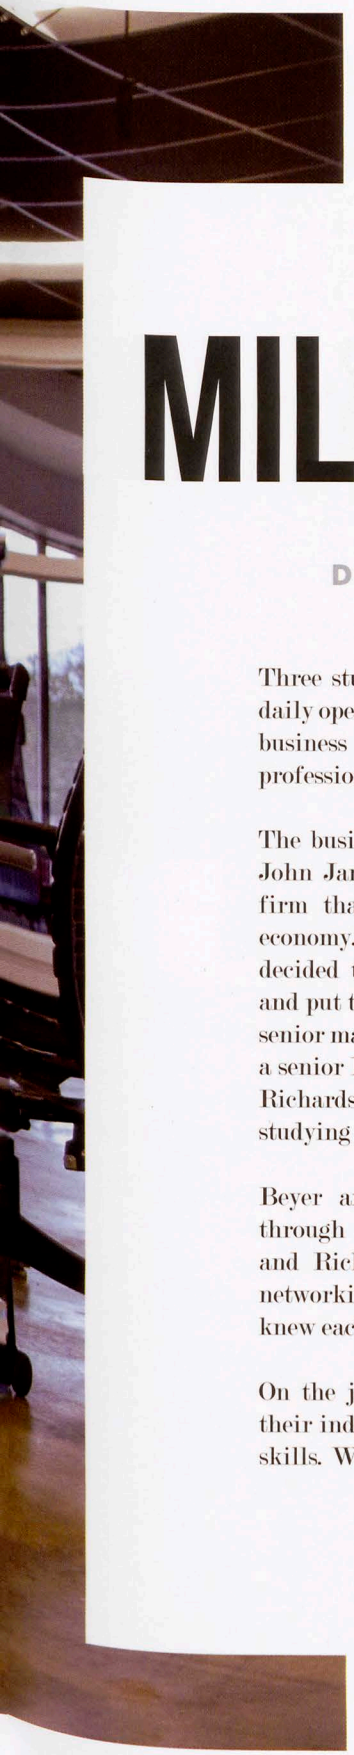

Students in Main Hill Media work in specific areas, but take on different responsibilities so they are prepared and knowledgeable about how to handle real life situations. The agency does not want students to get too wrapped up in their job descriptions because they are constantly changing.

"We all work close together and occasionally overlap responsibilities, which is a pretty awesome and effective way to get things done," Haney said.

White said he liked how the team works together to come up with new ideas. He said they bounce ideas off each other all the time and rely on each other's strengths to complete projects.

"We all bring our own talents to the table and when we combine them, we construct an innovative concoction of bright minds that are able to produce exceptional work," White said.

MILLION DOLLAR OPERATION

DESIGNER | Emily Thompson STORY | Jordan Tyler PHOTOS | Frances Wagnon

Three student interns were hired in August to oversee the daily operations of Scrub Shopper, a $1 million online retail business that sells scrubs, lab coats and shoes to medical professionals.

The business was founded in Fayetteville by UA alumnus John James through Hayseed Ventures, a venture capital firm that supports local startups to promote Arkansas' economy. At the beginning of the fall semester, James decided to hire three student interns from the university and put the business in their hands. He chose Nick Beyer, a senior management and marketing major, Tucker Partridge, a senior English major studying creative writing, and Ryan Richardson, a junior small business management major studying entrepreneurship.

Beyer and Partridge were referred to the opportunity through their business mentors in the Walton College, and Richardson heard about the opportunity at a local networking event for aspiring entrepreneurs. None of them knew each other before working together for Scrub Shopper.

On the job, Beyer said their schedules were flexible and their individual responsibilities matched with their unique skills. While he worked on marketing and public relations for the business, Richardson managed the operations and supply line and Partridge worked on social media presence and viral marketing. They all agreed the opportunity to operate and grow a business benefited them professionally.

"The connections made through meeting businesspeople in the community have been invaluable, and all three of us plan to use the tools after graduation," Beyer said.

While they were operating Scrub Shopper, Beyer, Partridge and Richardson developed a charitable new tactic for the business. They decided to set aside one percent of yearly revenue to support a medical mission trip and provide aid to underdeveloped countries, an idea which they said was pioneered by Beyer.

Beyer, Partridge and Richardson said they hope to grow the business from a $1 million company to a multi-million dollar company.

"We hope to become the go-to name when people buy scrubs, and we're all working hard to accomplish that goal," Beyer said.

The Sam M. Walton College of Business hosted the very first Blockchain Hackathon Friday, Oct. 27, and Saturday, Oct. 28, where sixty-five students collaborated over use cases provided by local industry leaders Walmart, Tyson Foods and J.B. Hunt Transport Inc. to create innovative solutions using blockchain technology.

The event kicked off Friday evening with a networking and team formation meeting where each company proposed two use cases from which the six teams could choose. Dr. Zach Steelman, associate professor for the Walton College, said although the plan after the meeting was to adjourn until the next morning, students took to the breakout rooms as soon as the meeting concluded to start discussing ideas and solutions to their cases.

The event on Saturday was scheduled to start at 7 a.m. and conclude at 9 p.m., but that morning students were already knocking on the door over an hour early, eager to get started. They worked throughout the day, then presented their solutions to the companies. Three teams were selected to win $100 gift cards and move on as candidates for the grand prize: suite tickets to the Razorback football game against the University of Missouri Tigers.

The grand prize-winning team included graduate information systems students Kathambari Venkataratinam, Anna Grace Franklin, Justin Black and Michelle Garcia, and sophomore engineering major Marshall Richards. Venkataratinam and Franklin both gleamed over the event and the hands-on, real-world experience it provided them.

"I think it was great that we got to work on real, complex use cases from local companies," Franklin said. "It made the work we were doing really meaningful, because I could actually visualize how blockchain technology could transform J.B. Hunt's shipment process."

"I realized that I am at the forefront of a revolution," Venkataratinam said. "Blockchain Hackathon has truly motivated me to venture new projects with the technology."

The teams were comprised of students from a variety of majors who represented all academic levels, from freshman to doctoral students. There were over 30 industry mentors and coaches from the participating companies in attendance, as well as a few university faculty and staff members, according to Dr. Steelman.

Other companies involved included IBM and ArcBest Technologies, who provided support and mentorship for the blockchain technology.

According to Dr. Steelman, blockchain technology is a way to manage transaction and distribution databases for companies by using cryptography to secure and protect that information, and could have a huge influence on the way businesses operate in the future.

"We are at the very early stages, so there's more opportunity as we dive into it deeper," Dr. Steelman said.

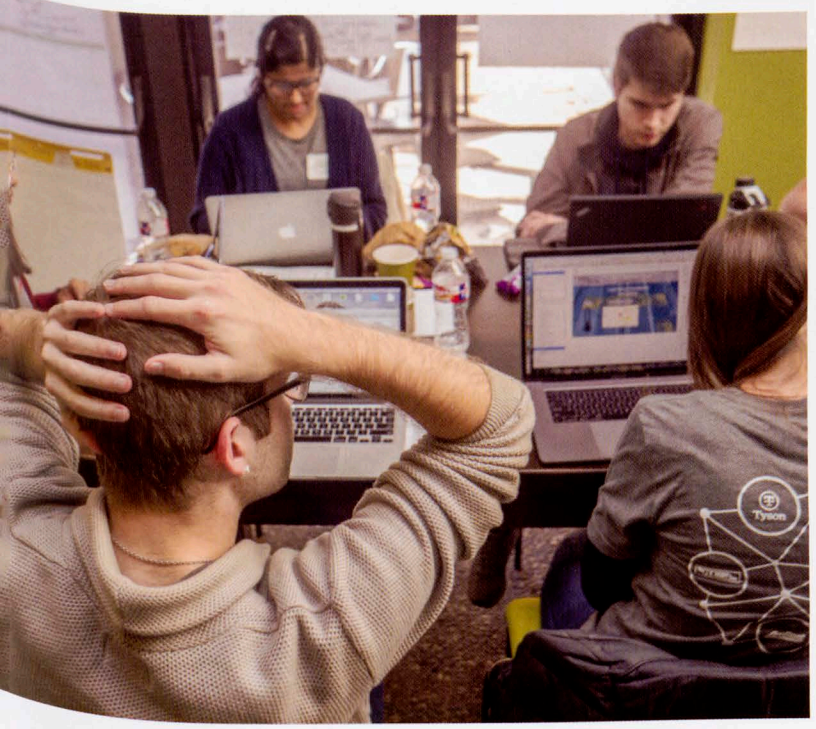

Based on the amount of positive feedback and student involvement, Steelman said he looks forward to planning more Blockchain Hackathons in the future.

HIGHLIGHTS

As a high school coach, he won 82 percent of his games and led Lake Travis High School to back-to-back, undefeated state championship seasons.

During his three seasons at SMU, Morris took the Mustangs from a 1-11 campaign in 2013 before he took over to the program's first bowl bid since 2012 with a 7-5 mark this season.

Morris' offensive scheme was exactly what SMU needed, as it increased the team's scoring output by 16.7 points per game – the second-largest increase in the nation in 2015.

Under Coach Morris, the Clemson Tigers posted the top three scoring seasons in school history, as well as four of the program's top five passing seasons.

New Athletic Director & Head Football Coach welcomed to Athletics Department

DESIGNER | HANNAH RAINER & MADISON LANDRY STORY | JORDAN TYLER PHOTOS | ATHLETICS

Hunter Yurachek and Chad Morris were hired into the Razorback Athletics department in the fall. Yurachek, vice chancellor and director of athletics, started in the spring and Morris, head football coach, will start closer to the upcoming football season.

Yurachek most recently was the athletic director at the University of Houston, and before that held the same position at Coastal Carolina University. He entered into a five-year contract with the University of Arkansas worth $850,000 per year.

"Everyone I have come across in the university and Fayetteville communities has been so welcoming to me and my family," Yurachek said. "This is quickly beginning to feel like home."

Morris is the thirty-third head football coach for the Razorbacks. He signed a six-year contract to coach the Razorback football team, worth $3.5 million per year, after Bret Bielema was dismissed in November following a 4-8 season.

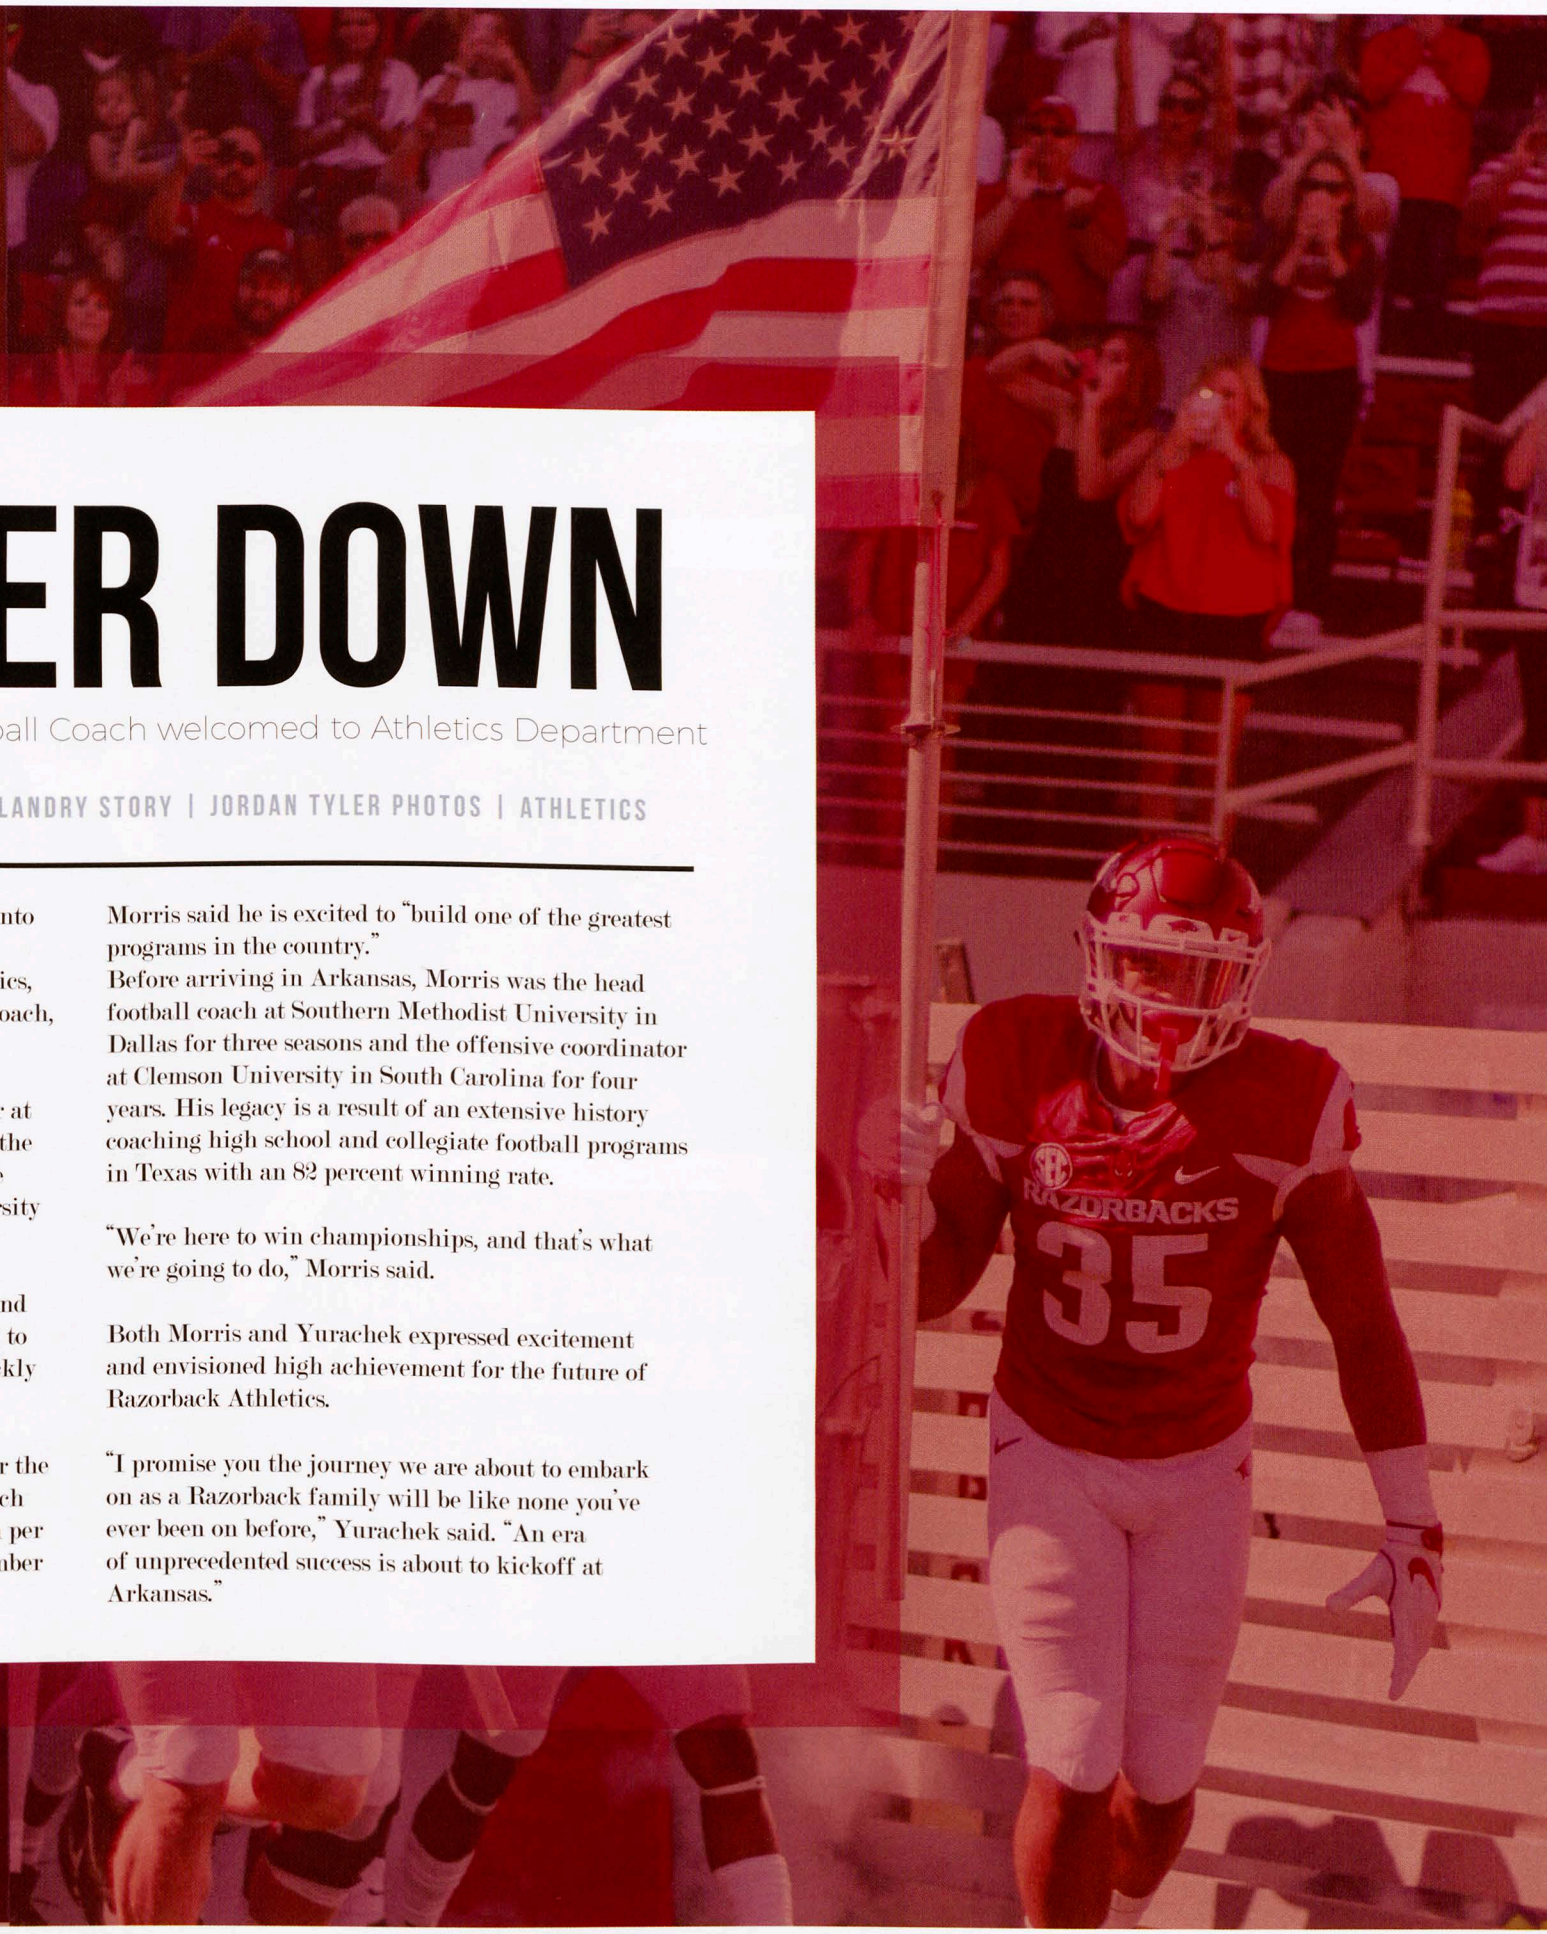

Morris said he is excited to "build one of the greatest programs in the country."

Before arriving in Arkansas, Morris was the head football coach at Southern Methodist University in Dallas for three seasons and the offensive coordinator at Clemson University in South Carolina for four years. His legacy is a result of an extensive history coaching high school and collegiate football programs in Texas with an 82 percent winning rate.

"We're here to win championships, and that's what we're going to do," Morris said.

Both Morris and Yurachek expressed excitement and envisioned high achievement for the future of Razorback Athletics.

"I promise you the journey we are about to embark on as a Razorback family will be like none you've ever been on before," Yurachek said. "An era of unprecedented success is about to kickoff at Arkansas."

A HELPING HAND

DESIGNER | Emily Thompson STORY | Caitlin Lane PHOTOS | Mary Helen Brighton

Plans to provide emergency and transitional housing for homeless people within the Fayetteville community were approved in November by the City of Fayetteville's planning commission. Dr. Kevin Fitzpatrick, member of the Serve Northwest Arkansas board, UA sociology professor and Jones Chair in Community for the Department of Sociology and Criminal Justice, developed the plans in conjunction with the Community Design Center.

The project, called the New Beginnings Homeless Community, was commissioned by Serve Northwest Arkansas, a local organization with a mission to inspire community service "for the benefit of the under-resourced, vulnerable, and exploited."

As of May, Fitzpatrick said, plans and land contracts for the project were still underway.

"We are still in the middle of that right now," he said.

According to Fitzpatrick, the new housing will have approximately 20 individual units. He explained the difference between emergency and transitional housing.

"Emergency housing is typically just 30 days," Fitzpatrick said, while transitional housing is "often times up to two years."

The goal of this development is to help people without shelter access the community easily and without complication, no matter what their circumstances may be, Fitzpatrick said. He added the eventual purpose of the community is to "create varying levels of preparation to exit into more stable housing."

Construction for the New Beginnings Homeless Community is expected to begin over the summer and be completed in early 2019.

A couple at Spoofer's Stone from the 1960s. The stone dates back to the construction of Old Main. As oxcarts transported limestone to the construction site, one broke and left what is now Spoofer's Stone on the Old Main lawn. It became a popular spot for couples.

When the University first began, male and female students were not allowed to fraternize, so a female student would sit on the stone and place a note in the stone's crack. The male student would then come get his mail. Spoofer's Stone has also become a popular place for marriage proposals.

All Hale Tony

DESIGNER | Deja Snyder STORY | Caitlin Lane PHOTOS | Kara Maurer

Award-winning Hollywood actor Tony Hale spoke about his personal and professional experiences at the Faulkner Performing Arts Center Jan. 29 as part of the Distinguished Lecture Series. He gave students helpful advice and explained what led him to a career in acting.

He told the audience he started his day in Fayetteville with breakfast at Arsaga's and ended it with dinner at Hugo's, making sure to hit some popular local spots.

Hale won two Emmys for Outstanding Supportive Actor in 2013 and 2015 for his performance as "Gary" on the hit HBO series "VEEP" and was nominated for the award four other times. He joked his very first show was "Shakespeare in the Parking Lot." Hale told the audience he invested himself into his community when he made the switch to acting.

"It was a very free environment for me," Hale said.

He initially studied journalism in college, but tried many different careers before finally pursuing on his dream of becoming an actor. Hale also took on different projects, such as writing a children's novel, "Archibald's Next Big Thing," and helping create a group to support young people and artists in their spiritual faith.

When asked to share a personal valuable lesson, Hale said, "One lesson I learned was that I didn't find myself very present in the now, and I went through times of crisis because when I finally got my dream, it really taught me that I wasn't very present in my time."

He said when people ask where he sees himself in five years, he tells them he is focused on being present and involved in the moment at hand instead.

"You don't ask a dentist what's next," he mentioned jokingly.

When asked if he would give his younger self any advice, Hale replied, "I would tell myself that you're enough... you are you for a specific reason."

Hale is an advocate for men and women who have survived human trafficking and slavery. He is actively involved with the International Justice Mission, which fights human trafficking and slavery.

As a last remark, Hale told the audience he would donate an original script signed by the entire cast of "Arrested Development," a TV show on which he played the role of "Buster," to 7 Hills Homeless Center so they could auction the script and use the money to raise awareness for the organization.

Kareem Abdul-Jabbar was hosted by the Distinguished Lecture Series to discuss his life and answer questions at Bud Walton Arena March 8.

The lecture and Q&A session to follow were moderated by Peal Dowe, associate professor and chair of the Department of Political Science, who said she was "truly honored" to have the privilege to interview Abdul-Jabbar.

While he is most widely known for his accomplishments in the NBA, Abdul-Jabbar is also known off the court as an intellectual and social activist. He discussed his life and careers as an athlete, author, actor, social activist and philanthropist, highlighting both his achievements and his struggles.

"There are times of progress, and there are times of backsliding," Abdul-Jabbar said.

Specifically, Abdul-Jabbar spoke about founding the Skyhook Foundation, which is an initiative to introduce STEM programs to schools in under-privileged communities in order to increase the educational opportunities for those students.

Abdul-Jabbar left his audience with a statement about American solidarity and his pride for his country.

"This is the greatest country in the world, and I hope these people will do all they can to preserve it," Abdul-Jabbar said.

BIRTHDAY BASH

DESIGNER | Bryan Murren STORY | Caitlin Lane PHOTOS | Connor Perkins

In an epic outpouring of pride and support, the University of Arkansas celebrated its 147th birthday April 4 and 5 with the launch of the "All In for Arkansas" campaign to raise money for various colleges, departments and scholarship funds across campus.

The celebration kicked off with an online fundraising event that lasted exactly 1,871 minutes, a tribute to the year the university was founded.

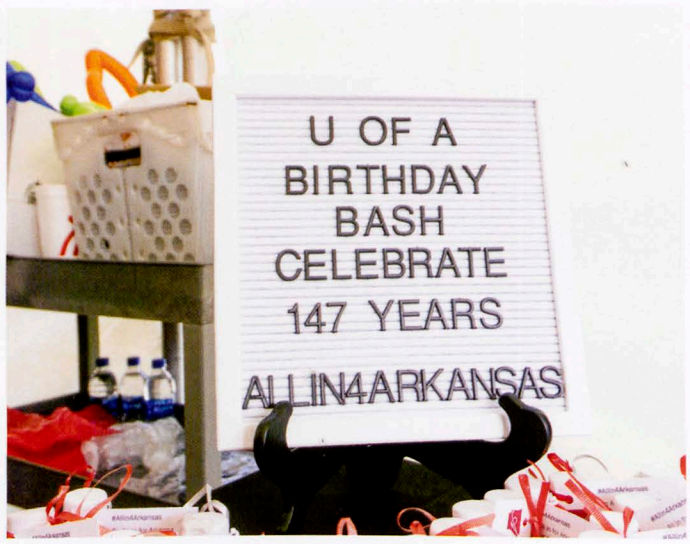

An on-campus Birthday Bash was hosted by the Student Alumni Association in the Union Mall area. The event featured a photo booth, music, free cupcakes, t-shirts and other party favors.

"I had a great time celebrating and supporting the university on its birthday," Clay Taylor, sophomore marketing major, said.

Throughout the day, students and faculty were encouraged to use #Allin4Arkansas when posting photos on social media to spread the word about the Birthday Bash, inspire school spirit, and qualify to win monetary prizes. The winners of these photo contests raised money for their choice of college, school, program or scholarship fund on campus.

It was a record-breaking birthday celebration; the campus community raised over $433,000 with a total of 1,292 gifts.

MAKING A SPLASH

Freshman diver makes a big splash at nationals

DESIGNER | Hannah Rainer STORY | Jordan Tyler PHOTOS | Arkansas Athletics

On March 16, freshman diver Brooke Schultz took the top tier of the podium after winning first place at the NCAA Swimming and Diving Championships. With a score of 399.45, she became the first individual Razorback athlete since 1985 to win a national title.

Schultz said she went into her final dive down 20 points, but managed to nail the last dive to secure her first-place spot. Her top competitor, Sharae Zheng, senior at the University of Nevada in Reno, placed second just five and a half points below Schultz.

She competed against 46 other women for the national title in the 3-meter dive and 48 in the 1-meter, where she placed ninth.

Coming into this competition, Schultz said her strategy was to maintain her best physical condition, focus on consistency and take things "one dive at a time."

"When I'm diving in the meet I try to focus on what I can do, because it's not a sport where you play defense or anything like that," Schultz said. "You can only do the best you can and whatever everybody else does, that's out of your power."

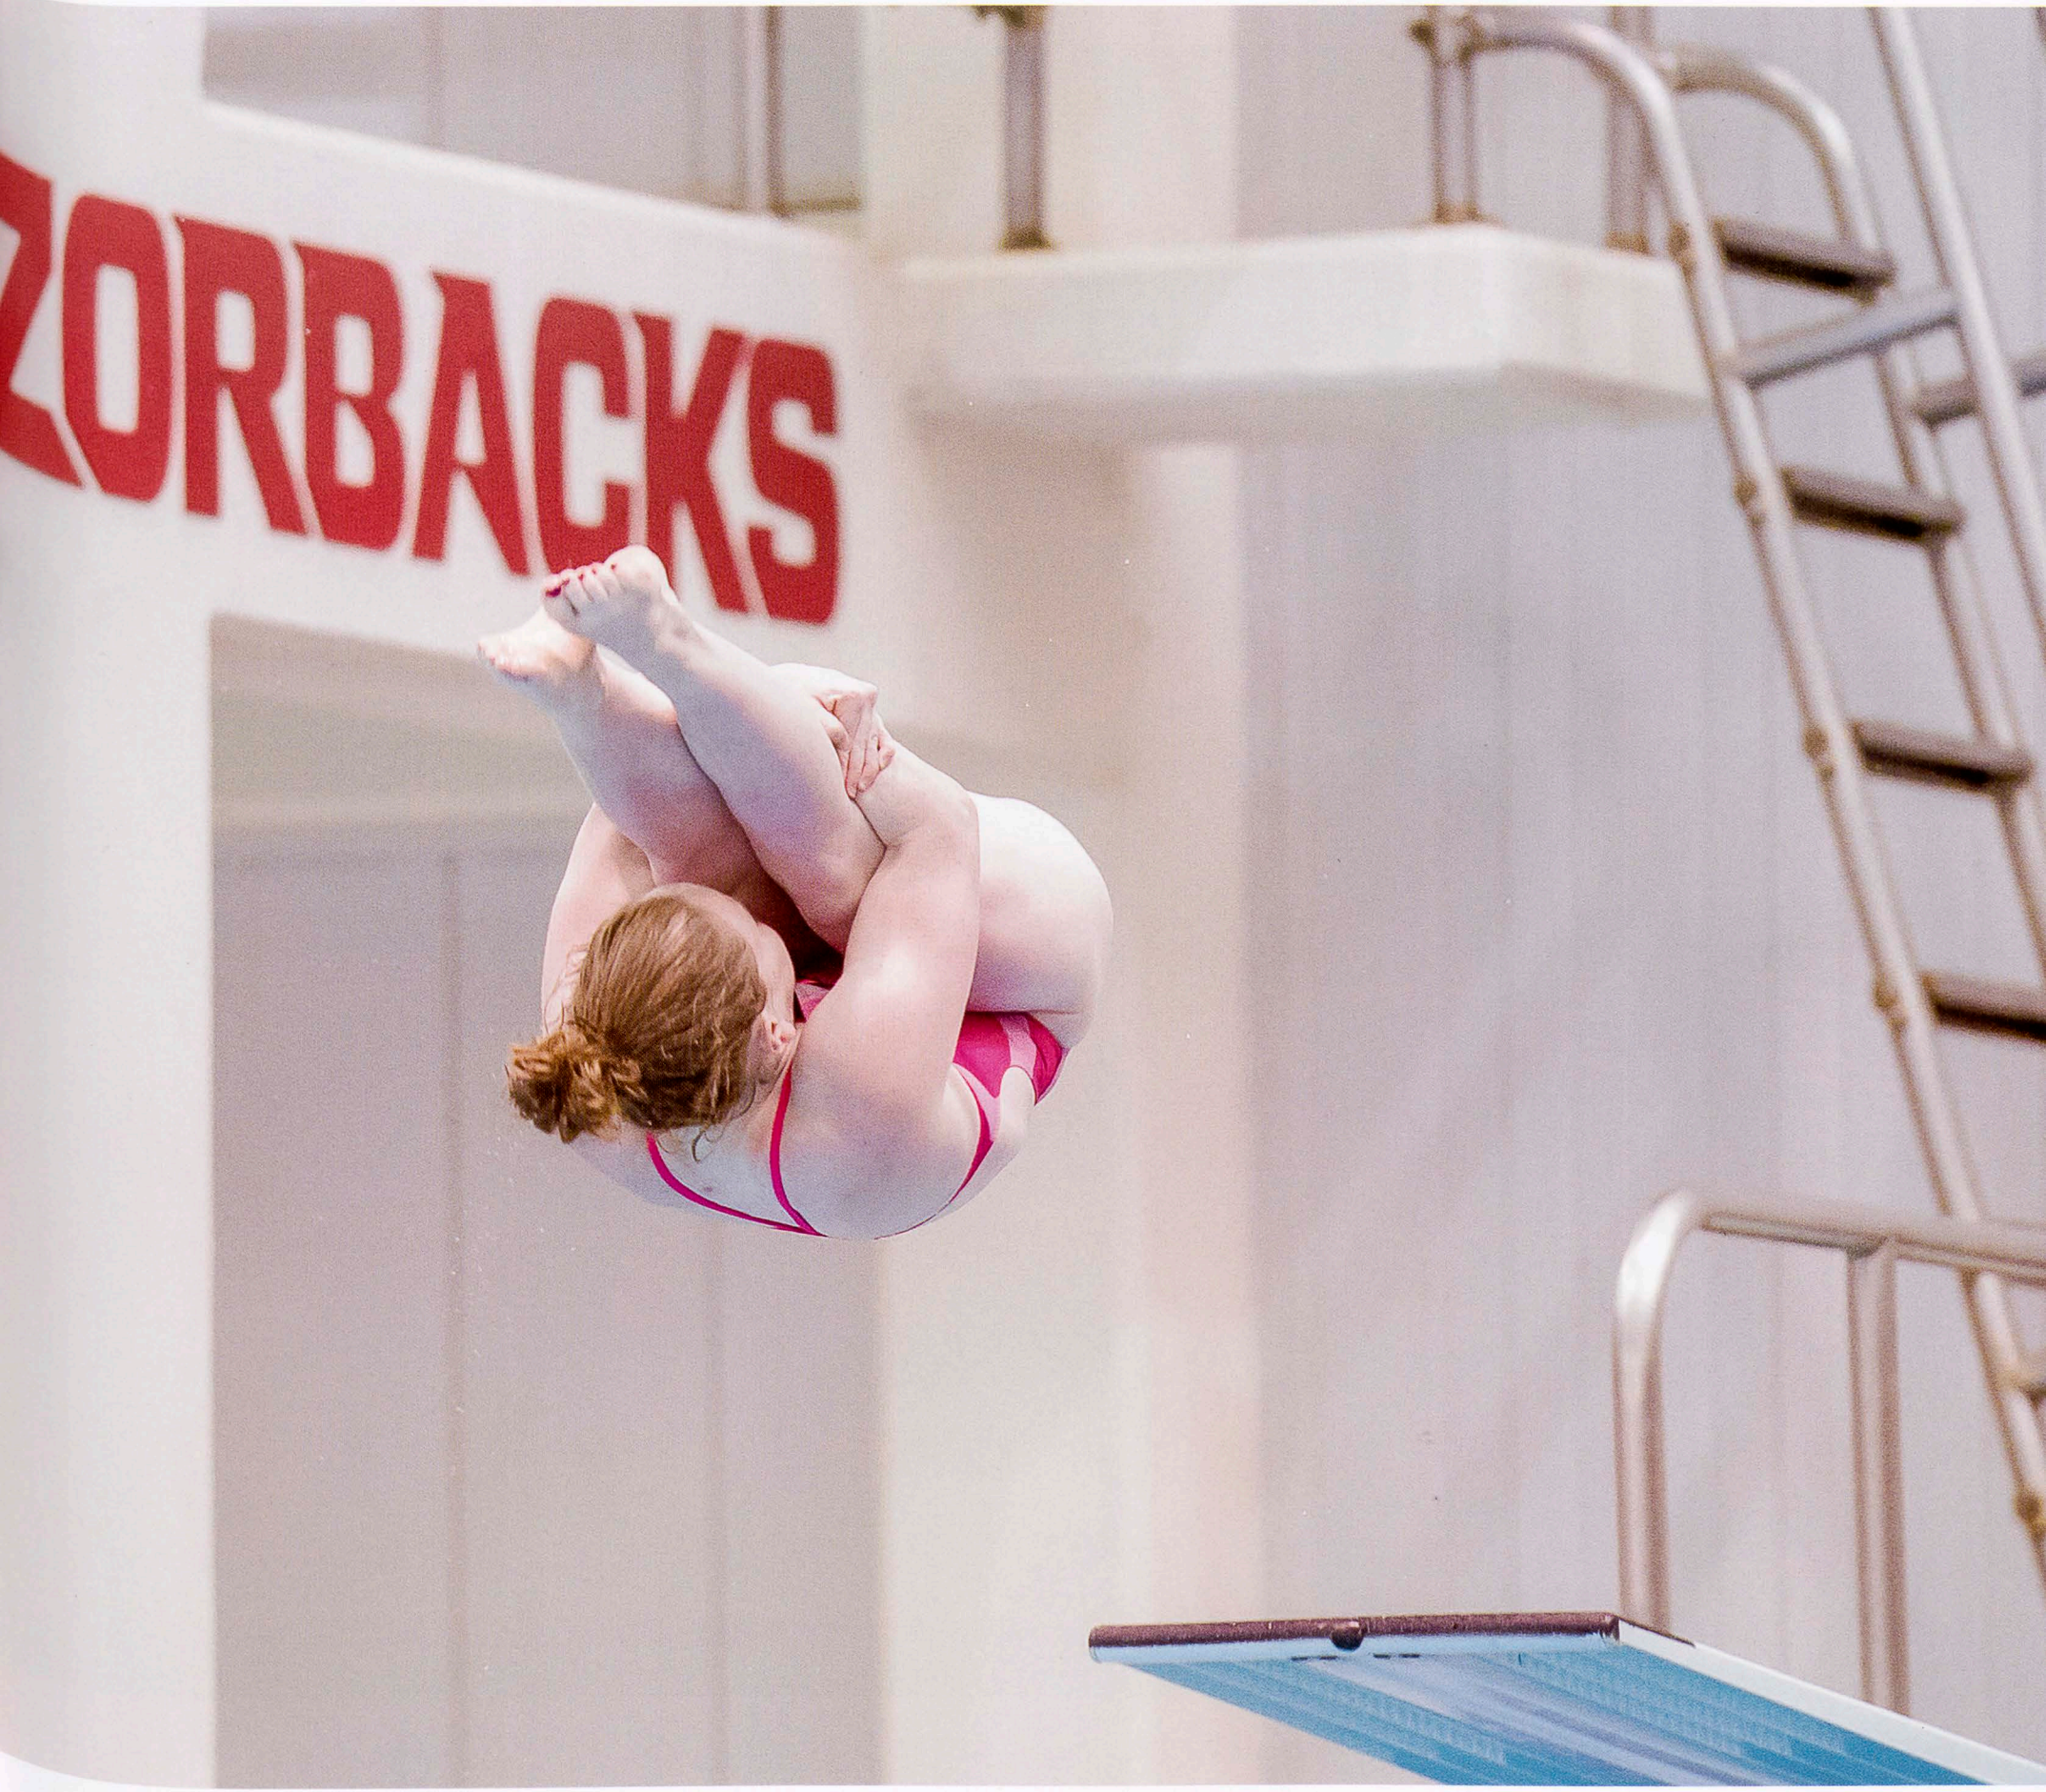

Schultz has been diving since she was nine years old, introduced by her father, Dale, who is also her coach at the University of Arkansas. Dale has been coaching at the collegiate level for about 30 years, and first served as the head diving coach from 1989 to 2000 and again from 2008 to 2013.

While this is the first collegiate national title Schultz has competed for, she has dived in junior and senior nationals since 2009, winning the 1-meter twice and the overall senior nationals competition last December. She has been as far as Russia to compete, traveling to Budapest and Taiwan just last summer.

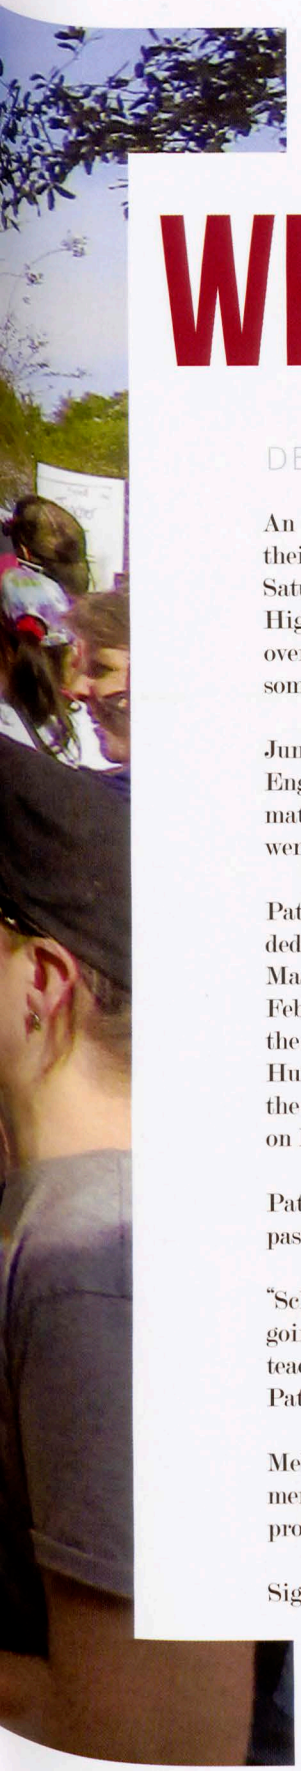

She said her favorite parts of diving are the people she has met and the opportunities she has been given through the sport.

"I look forward to those experiences and those friendships that you gain with the people that you dive with and dive against," Schultz said.

Throughout the rest of her collegiate career, Schultz hopes to improve and continue the success she reaped this season.

WHEN ENOUGH IS ENOUGH

An estimated 500 protestors packed the Bentonville Square to add their voices to the nationwide March For Our Lives movement Saturday, March 24. Organized by Sadie Bell, senior at Bentonville High School, the local rally drew high school students from all over Northwest Arkansas, as well as teachers, parents, residents and some University of Arkansas students.

Juniors Abby Patty, anthropology major, and Mallory Melton, English major, attended with their friend Jacob Maestri, senior math major, who initially invited them to the event. Patty said they went to brunch, made signs and went to the rally together.

Patty and Melton said the rally began with 19 minutes of silence, dedicated to every high school student killed since the tragedy at Marjory Stoneman Douglas High School in Parkland, Florida on Feb. 14. Seventeen minutes were dedicated to the 17 lives lost in the Parkland shooting, one minute for the victim of a shooting at Huffman High School in Alabama on March 7, and one minute for the victim of the Great Mills High School shooting in Maryland on March 20.

Patty said her main motivation for attending the rally was her passionate opinion against arming and training teachers with guns.

"Schools are already under-funded, and that funding should be going to getting history books up to date, or providing training for teachers so they can work better with students with disabilities," Patty said. "I just think the money could be spent better elsewhere."

Melton agreed, saying, "You could even use that money to fund mental health resources, instead of more guns, to combat the problem."

Signs held by students, teachers, families and other supporters read, "We are students, we are victims, we are change," "Thoughts and prayers aren't enough," and "Protect kids, not guns." Patty said her sign, which read, "Books, not bullets," resembled many others at the rally.

Melton said the atmosphere of the rally was encouraging and that there seemed to be many good conversations happening between protestors, whether it was complimenting each others' signs or discussing their reasons for supporting gun control.

"I would describe it as empowering," Patty added.

Many high school students gave speeches calling on political leaders to enact changes to gun policy to prevent future gun violence in our nation's schools. Leaders from other organizations, such as Moms Demand Action, chimed in by expressing their concern and support for the issue. Others challenged politicians to disassociate themselves from the National Rifle Association, the leading lobbying group on the pro-gun side of the debate.

While a huge majority of people were there to support the rally, a few small groups of counter-protestors attended as well. Law enforcement officers at the rally kept the peace by separating the counter-protestors from the main crowd with physical barriers. When some counter-protestors began chanting during the moments of silence, according to Patty and Melton, police quickly identified them, calmly approached, and asked them to respect the victims and other protestors.

THE HUMAN LIBRARY

DESIGNER | Madison Landry STORY | Jordan Tyler PHOTOS | Mary Helen Brighton

Students, staff and faculty with fascinating personal narratives shared their stories with other members of the campus community in an inclusionary, dialogue-based event known as the Human Library. The event took place in Holcombe Hall from April 11 to 13.

The concept of a human library has been recreated all over the world, and the University of Arkansas had even hosted them in the past, according to Tyler Quattlebaum, graduate assistant for the Center for Multicultural and Diversity Education. With the help of many other campus organizations, Quattlebaum helped bring the initiative back on campus for the first time since 2010.

"This spring's Human Library exceeded our expectations and we are excited to see how this event grows over subsequent semesters," Quattlebaum said, mentioning the Center for Multicultural and Diversity Educations' plans to organize another Human Library this fall.

Education Librarian Laura Cameron's narrative was called "Coming Out Every Day: Being Bisexual in a 'Straight' Relationship." She spoke to three different participants with whom she said she had meaningful conversations that she hopes were as rewarding for them as they were for her.

"I wanted to talk to readers about the challenges of being bisexual in a straight-coded relationship, the struggle of feeling invisible or erased, and the mental work it takes to come out every day, in big and small ways," Cameron said. "I also hoped that by putting my story out in the world I could help at least one other person feel less alone, less invisible, and less erased."

Cameron said being a part of the Human Library helped her confront and empower herself, and provided her with a sense of accomplishment.
"Taking ownership of my story was an important step for me on my lifelong journey to embrace and celebrate my own being," Cameron said.

Keukeu Abdullah also participated as a "human book," with her narrative called "A Muslim Woman from Indonesia," in which she explained how she has faced false stereotypes about her heritage, physical appearance and experiences while living in Arkansas.

Abdullah said her feelings of the event were hard to describe in words, but that she "felt thankful and connected" sharing her narrative with one student and one class of nursing students. She has worked for the Card Office for the past 14 years, and said she considers Fayetteville as her hometown after so long.

Originally implemented in Copenhagen, Human Libraries aimed to address and eliminate stereotypes and prejudices through conversation. Real people, referred to as "books," organized a personal narrative to share with participants, or "readers," who sat down with each other to listen, ask questions and build a dialogue promoting understanding, empathy and inclusion.

"The more we can learn about all the amazing humans cohabitating with us on planet earth, the more understanding and open we can be with each other," Cameron said.

"It is a beautiful thing to see a room full of strangers having deep, meaningful conversations and forming relationships with people so different from themselves," Quattlebaum said. "The power of dialogue is real, and the conversations that happened during the Human Library promise to have a ripple effect across our entire community."

SAM HARRIS

Sam Harris has a passion to help alleviate hunger and food insecurity. This passion led him to pursue a bachelor's degree in agricultural business with a minor in agricultural leadership. Although he had grown up in a rural farming community, Harris was first exposed to what it "meant to be hungry" when he participated in an internship in India in 2014. While there, he worked to identify weaknesses in agricultural productivity and directly observed the local men, women and children who were facing food insecurity. Since that time, Harris has had the opportunity to participate in several learning opportunities that have that exposed him to hunger and poverty across the globe and further solidified his pursuit of a career to address the issue. He served as a community development intern in Belize and participated in a service-learning research experience in Vietnam. Harris is a 2017 Harry S. Truman Scholar. He became a Wallace-Carver Fellow at the USDA Risk Management Agency and has been a research assistant with the University of Arkansas Cooperative Extension Service. "As a graduate of the University of Arkansas, I am confident that I have the ability to make significant contributions to alleviating hunger and implementing effective rural development initiatives that address some of the biggest instances of social injustice, poverty and inequality across the world," Harris said.

RAYGAN SYLVESTER

Raygan Sylvester is completing her degree in marketing with a minor in management and will be pursuing a master's degree in business administration. Sylvester founded the 501(c)(3) non-profit organization Think S.A.F.E.: Seatbelts are for Everyone when she was 15. As a student at the University of Arkansas, she has participated in internships with Razorback Athletics Marketing and the American Heart Association and she is a National State Farm Youth Advisory Board Member. She has served for four years with the Associated Student Government, most recently serving as its director of philanthropy in 2017. Sylvester has also served as senior experience special projects chair for the Student Alumni Board and as the social media chair for the Distinguished Lectures Committee. She is also a member of Kappa Kappa Gamma and a U of A Representative to the Arkansas Student Leadership Forum. Sylvester intends to continue to work with her own non-profit and would like to work with others as well. She would like to utilize her skills to aid non-profit organizations in their marketing efforts and to help them to gain visibility for their services and events. "I recognize the amount of work it takes to run programs like my own and applaud individuals who have dedicated their lives to serving others," Sylvester said.

Razorback Classics

RYANN ALONSO

Ryann Alonso is passionate about voters' rights and engaging others in the political process. She led the effort to establish an early voting center on the University of Arkansas campus. Although her efforts and those of the many people she engaged in the proposal reached a block that they could not control, she did not let it deter her. She instead focused her efforts on engaging her fellow students in registering to vote in Fayetteville in time for the 2016 election. She engaged local and state authorities in educating students about the importance of their involvement in local and state politics. Alonso also worked with various campus organizations, including housing, Greek Life and other RSO's, to help register more than 560 people in time for the election. Her experiences helping others engage with the political process has fueled Alonso's passions for civic engagement. After graduation, Alonso intends to go to law school and would like to continue her work with voters' rights and engaging others in civic related issues.

MACARENA ARCE

Macarena Arce is a determined self-starter who decided that she wanted to study in the United States, researched the process and then made her dream come true. During her early days on the University of Arkansas campus, she developed a plan to get involved and then used it as motivation to become engaged academically, socially and politically. Arce has made a concerted effort to share her country with others while also experiencing the life of a college student in the U.S. She has gained great knowledge of herself through this process and learned that she can also inspire others by her actions and her decision to pursue her dreams. Arce looks forward to the challenges that the future brings with the knowledge that she has the determination and skills to face them.

GARRETT BETHEL

Garrett Bethel is focused on serving others and looks to a future in medicine. He began as a servant leader early in life as the oldest of five children who helped take care of his younger siblings, earning the nickname of T.P, third parent. He then followed his grandfather's lead and has been actively involved in medical mission work in Guatemala. Bethel reports that these trips have influenced both his interest in practicing medicine and his interest in philanthropic and humanitarian efforts. Bethel has continued in roles of service and leadership as a student, while also seeking opportunities to increase his medical knowledge through a variety of outlets. He participated in a medically focused study abroad program in Puebla, Mexico. He has worked as an undergraduate research assistant at Ivey labs since fall 2016. Bethel has also participated in medical employment opportunities during school breaks in 2017. Through his mission work and other experiences, Bethel has experienced the impact that medicine can have on one's life, which serves to reinforce the lesson that his grandfather shared saying that "we have been blessed so that we may be a blessing to others."

JACK CASEY

Jack Casey learned leadership through practice; he had it thrust upon him through sport and rose to the occasion. He then carried that knowledge with him to the University of Arkansas. Casey has served in numerous leadership roles on campus. However, one of the most impactful for him and for future U of A students is the leadership he has demonstrated as a part of the Rugby Club at the university. During his time with the club he has led the transition of the team from a DIAA team to a D1A team and has led them to be nationally ranked. During this time, Casey gained personal recognition as a player. However, beyond performance on the field, Jack also leaves a legacy for the next generation of Razorback Rugby, through the establishment of an endowed scholarship program. Casey led the fundraising charge for this effort and the team was able to raise enough money to fully endow the scholarship during his tenure. Casey has also succeeded academically, studying economics abroad in Scotland – during which he also took the opportunity to diversify his Rugby skills – and serving three consecutive summers as a consulting analyst intern at Accenture.

GRACE DAVIS

Grace Davis has taken personal tragedy and embraced it as a way to find her path and focus on her future. As a nursing student, Davis already knew that she wanted to help others, however, as she navigated through her grief at the loss of her father, she found new clarity in the direction she would like her nursing career to follow. Davis applied for and received a prestigious Summer III Externship with the Mayo Clinic in Rochester, Minnesota. During her 10 week externship, Davis learned valuable lessons about patient care, felt the peace of acceptance her father's passing, and identified her purpose in life. Davis said, "I am truly able to connect with my patients on a different, deeper level." She will begin her a position as a registered oncology nurse in August 2018.

SARAH-BETH DELAY

Sarah-Beth Delay has utilized her undergraduate degree to study national and global issues like food and international trade and how law and policy decisions affect people around the world. She has been working toward her goal to attend law school this fall. Along the way, Delay studied abroad in Mozambique and Belize and found herself experiencing changing perspectives on the world and her place in it. In Mozambique, she worked with locals farmers to study the economic impact of the farm on the local community. "The extraordinary challenges I faced while implementing an economic impact survey in a developing country taught me adaptability, patience, and perseverance," shared Delay. She furthered her education in Belize with a service-learning internship helping develop the tools and business model to aid backyard poultry growers in a sustainable manner. Delay feels that these experiences as well as her coursework and involvement on campus have well prepared her for the next stage in her life.

BREYANNA DULANEY

Breyanna Dulaney is pursuing her dream to become a physician. She encourages everyone to persevere no matter what challenges may face them. Breyanna, herself, faces a personal challenge that might make others give up. "Sometimes I imagine a world where everyone shrinks away from sacrificing their talents and services for the greater good because of the challenges they face," Bryeanna shared. "If they did, so many groundbreaking discoveries, inventions, medical and technological advances made by people who are just like me would not exist." During her pursuit of her biology degree, Breyanna has also become involved with several projects and organizations that will supplement her education and aid in her goal to attend medical school. She serves as a Health Coach at Washington Regional Health Center. She participated on the Public Health Team during a service-learning project in Belize and volunteers in the emergency department at the Veteran's Affairs Hospital in Fayetteville.

DALEY HARVEY

For Daley Harvey, the field of Dentistry encompasses all traits she has learned to value most: strong work ethic, compassion for others and determination. She was inspired to pursue her career by the limited access to dental care and education for so many in the community where she was raised. She has devoted her time at the University of Arkansas to prepare herself for her chosen career as a pediatric dentist. She has become active in the community, shadowed various dentists and volunteered at both the Arkansas Mission of Mercy Dental Clinic and the WelcomeHealth free clinic. Daley is also a volunteer for Natural Teeth Nonprofit Organization and, in response to a need she saw, created the "Emboldened Natural Teeth Superhero Program" for special education and the "Under HIS Umbrella Program" for the homeless. "With my involvement in Natural Teeth, I see dentistry as a profession that allows me to enhance a person's self-confidence and physical, mental and emotional well-being through oral care," offered Daley. She has been accepted to the Louisiana State University Health Science Center School of Dentistry and will pursue her dentistry degree this fall.

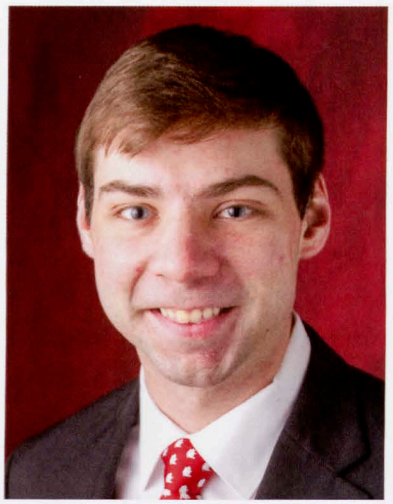

STEPHEN KOMAR

While Stephen Komar's path to the University of Arkansas may have been somewhat unusual and initially tinged with disappointment, he is grateful for the outcome. "I wouldn't have ended up at Arkansas without it, and I couldn't have asked for more from the college experience I have had here," Komar said. Komar will be graduating with double degrees in economics and international studies, with minors in Arabic and Middle East studies. He has participated in study abroad experiences in the Czech Republic, Vietnam and the United Arab Emirates. Along the way he has interned in the office of U.S. Senator Roy Blunt, helped found the registered student organization Students for Refugees and served in a variety of community and campus leadership roles. Komar plans to pursue a career of service and has expressed interest in teaching overseas, working with a non-profit and attending law school.

KARLI LIPINSKI

Karli Lipinski envisions a future with greater understanding of degenerative brain disease which will result in better treatments and, possibly, cures for these devastating illnesses. Her decision to pursue medical science was shaped by her personal experiences growing up. During her undergraduate career pursuing a degree in chemistry with a focus in biochemistry, Lipinski has sought to understand the biochemical process of disease. She has worked to contribute to the understanding of how to manage and treat diseases and has conducted several research projects in support of that goal. She has researched targeted drug delivery during a summer at the University of Kentucky, conducted research at the University of Arkansas for Medical Sciences as a part of a summer research fellowship and conducted original research for her honors thesis. Lipinski will be pursuing graduate studies in chemistry, with a focus in chemical biology at the University of Wisconsin-Madison next semester. Her goal is to become a professor. She would like to conduct impactful research related to neurodegenerative diseases, mentor the next generation of scientists and increase diversity in STEM fields.

TRISTAN LOCKE

Tristan Locke found a passion for business and investments early in his college career. His involvement with the Garrison Financial Institute heightened his interest for financial services. His experience led him to an internship with State Street Corporation in Kansas City as a global operations intern. He also completed an internship in the Corporate Financial Services division of ExxonMobil. For the past two years, he has worked as a private equity analyst for NewRoad Capital Partners, a Northwest Arkansas based private equity firm. Locke has also been involved with many organizations at the U of A and has held multiple leadership positions within the Associated Student Government, the Walton Honors Student Executive Board and Kappa Alpha Order. Locke was a member of the 2017 Homecoming Court. He is a member of Beta Sigma Gamma, the business honors society. As a recipient of the Toller Honors College Research Fellowship, Locke has completed an honors thesis titled, "A University Partnership for Valuation & Succession Planning for Arkansas Business" and graduated Summa Cum Laude. He was has been honored as an Outstanding Graduating Senior for the Walton College Finance Department and has been selected as the 2018 Walton Student Commencement Speaker. After graduation, Locke will join Five Elms Capital, a Kansas City based private equity firm focused on software and tech-enabled services.

POOJA LUKHI

Pooja Lukhi has placed education first her entire life. She is a first-generation American-born Indian, who will be the first in her family to pursue a career as a physician. Lukhi's interest and love for medicine was cultivated through a lifetime of exposure to poor health illiteracy. She has pursued degrees in biology and biochemistry with a minor in mathematics. She serves as a health coach with Washington Regional and has volunteered with the Veteran's Health Care System of the Ozarks Emergency Room and the WelcomeHealth Free Dental Clinic. She has been involved with multiple student organizations and has served on two service learning study abroad programs for health programs. Lukhi was selected as a member of the Public Health Team for the Community Development Program in Belize and she participated in Health Teams Abroad in Sweden. "Driven by my life's motto, I will treat the path of the physician as a life-long learning process, accepting all challenges and responsibilities to my patients while never backing down in the face of adversity," said Lukhi. Lukhi has received early acceptance to the University of Arkansas for Medical Sciences.

LANDRI MCGREGOR

For Landri McGregor, her successes as an academic and as a leader on campus are just part of the growth she experienced while at the University of Arkansas. "I learned that life is more about relationships and people with whom you share your life," shared Landri. As the president of Kappa Kappa Gamma for the 2017 year, Landri found herself utilizing her own life experiences to council others in times of grief. She shared that her role as president of Kappa allowed her to make a meaningful difference in the lives of others. In addition to her leadership roles with Kappa Kappa Gamma, Landri is also a leader with Beta Gamma Sigma Honor Society, Sigma Chi Mu Tau Honor Society, the Student Alumni Board and other organizations. She has been a merchandising intern with the Walmart Corporation and a participant in Model United Nations. Landri has participated in the Indian International Business Seminar and studied abroad at the University of Arkansas Rome Center. "Wherever my career path leads me, I know that one thing will stay consistent; my desire to be a difference maker," Landri said.

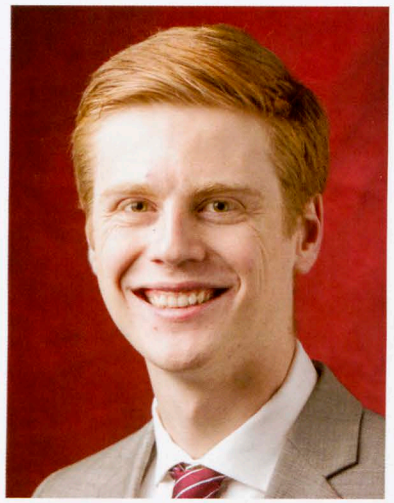

NASEER NASEEM

Naseer Naseem seeks to improve the world through service in his dual passions. Naseer has long been interested in pursuing a career in medicine, however, he is also strongly passionate about using his voice to support conservation. Naseer's undergraduate research reflects these passions. He has conducted research involving the delivery of cancer vaccines, conducted an anthropological study of teeth of certain populations, and participated in the DNA barcoding of specific Civet Populations to determine trafficking patterns. Naseer has studied abroad in Tanzania, Spain, Thailand and New Zealand and spent more than 200 hours shadowing a variety of medical professionals. Naseer is currently working with the Marshallese community in Northwest Arkansas through health sessions and tutoring, but one day hopes to serve them as a medical physician and patient advocate.

GRAY ORMAN

Gray Orman was inspired to make a difference and share compassion at an early age, after witnessing the suffering in his mother's face due to medical issues. He shared that after much reflection, he realized that his desire to become a physician began when he learned the patient's perspective with his mom. Gray's compassion and desire to help has extended into all aspects of his life on the University of Arkansas Campus. His academic life has centered on preparing for medical school, pursuing biochemistry with a pre-med focus. His undergraduate research is focused on the potential medicinal purposes of the subject. Gray has participated in Health Teams Abroad in Sweden. He has volunteered at Arkansas Bone & Joint and shadowed a variety of medical professionals. He is an officer of Alpha Epsilon Delta (Premedical Honor Society) and has been involved with a variety of other student organizations. Gray has also had extensive volunteer experience working with the Jane B. Gearhart Full Circle Campus Food Pantry. "The U of A has not only provided me with an excellent learning experience, but has given me the opportunities to expand my compassion and pursue a career in medicine," said Gray. Gray has received early acceptance to the UAMS College of Medicine.

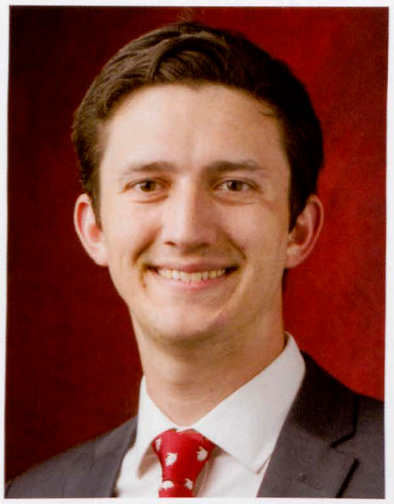

TRENT SCACCIA

Trent Scaccia found his passion for blending sustainability and business while at the University of Arkansas. Scaccia served as founder and president of the University of Arkansas Net Impact chapter, achieving gold chapter status by the national Net Impact organization. He also helped found the Northwest Arkansas professional chapter of Net Impact. Scaccia authored the 2018 University of Arkansas Climate Action Plan and has been active in shaping university zero-waste and carbon neutral policies as the director of sustainability for the Associated Student Government. Trent is an intern for the Office for Sustainability and is also a supplemental instructor for the economics department. Scaccia has worked as a research intern focusing on energy policy for the Swaziland Economic Policy Analysis and Research Centre in Africa. He has also worked for Santander in Dallas as a strategy analyst and will be working there full time. Scaccia plans to continue his education by pursuing an MBA and hopes to eventually work in the renewable energy and clean tech space.

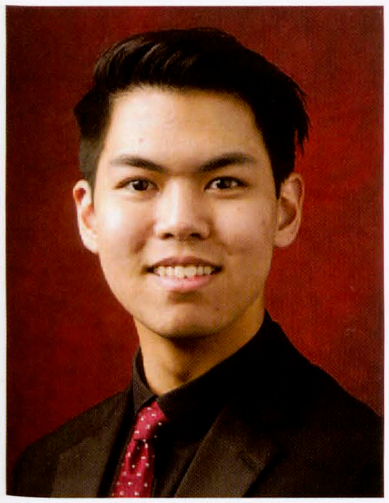

OLIVIA TZENG

As a first generation American-born Chinese living in a small town with little cultural diversity, Olivia Tzeng learned to embrace her cultural background, find her sense of self and share teaching moments with others about her background and the larger diversity in the world. This deeper understanding of herself and the diversity around her has led Tzeng to an interest in global heath and global medicine as a career. She has participated in multiple undergrad research projects including neuroscience research and developmental psychology motor development research. Tzeng studied Tibetans in exile, traditional medicine and healthcare practices in India. She serves as a health coach with the Washington Regional Medical Center. Tzeng has been involved with numerous student organizations on campus and has served as the president of the Volunteer Action Center since July 2017. "I hope to work with the most vulnerable populations around the world," Tzeng said. "As a product of this interest, I intend to spend my upcoming gap year working at various medical refugee reception centers in Nepal before attending medical school the following year."

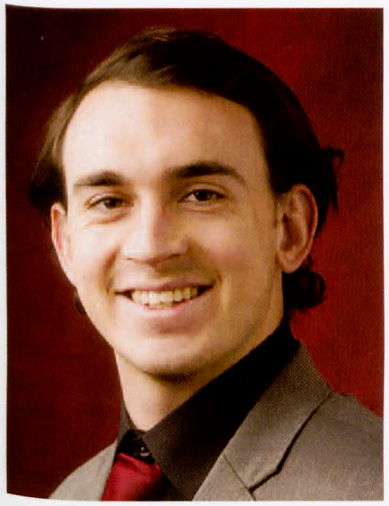

WILLIAM WATKINS

William Watkins' career path began with an interest in service. He first became involved on campus to serve, which is evidenced by many of the titles he has held: service chair, philanthropy chair, director of veterans affairs and chairman of the senate. Watkins attributes his accomplishments to his interest in service. "My service mindset led to leadership experiences which afforded me an opportunity to study abroad and help make a difference in the lives of others," Watkins said. During the course of his education, Watkins discovered his passion for economics which then led to internship and study abroad opportunities. He has participated in the International Business Seminar in Japan and the National Association of Business Economics Economic Policy Conference in Washington, D.C. His internship with the F-35 Program Office Project Management – Japan Team with Lockheed-Martin has led to a full-time job offer with Lockheed Martin after graduation, which he has accepted. "I am grateful that the University of Arkansas has provided a multitude of opportunities and experiences to expand my interest in service," Watkins said.

PAOLO GARCIA

Paolo Garcia followed a non-traditional path toward the pursuit of a medical degree. Following a relocation to the United States as a young child, he spent much of his life in the performing arts with particular emphasis on choral and instrumental performance. However, Garcia always had a desire to be a physician. A desire that was furthered by his own experiences with doctors as a patient and as the concerned family member of a patient. Garcia decided to apply his creative fire to the field of medicine and the first step was the decision to pursue a degree in biomedical engineering at the University of Arkansas. During his time at the U of A, as he has worked toward his goal of attending medical school. Garcia has participated in the Danish Institute of Study Abroad and held internships at the Internal Medicine & Geriatric Center of London, Kentucky, and A. Yumang Rehab Services. He has also conducted original research and participated in various research teams. Garcia serves as a volunteer at the Washington Regional Cancer Support Home.

KENDRICK HARDAWAY

For Kendrick Hardaway, the theme of sharing is woven through his choices in major, as a student citizen and for his future goals. Hardaway explains that his parents guided him to understand that we each must share our time and love, our knowledge and experience and that we all share the earth. This understanding influenced Hardaway's decision to pursue a degree in biological engineering with a minor in sustainability. By seeking to share, Hardaway became involved in various philanthropic organizations and became the volunteer coordinator for Tri Cycle Farms. He has become an opinion writer for the Arkansas Traveler and an intern for the Office for Sustainability. As Hardaway's focus on sharing the earth has increased, he has sought additional educational opportunities to enrich his knowledge. He has participated in summer undergraduate research at the University of Florida, studied Sustainability in the Euro-Food System at the University of Ghent, and participated in a sustainable development study abroad program in Belize. Hardaway seeks to pursue a doctoral degree focusing on optimizing the health of the environment and people. His goal is to become an environmental consultant and educator – sharing his time and knowledge to help improve the way we share the earth.

LETTERS FROM THE EDITORS

Emily Thompson Editor In Chief

Every year, the Razorback staff is charged with the mission of documenting what occurred that year at the University of Arkansas. Our goal is paint a picture of the student's experience at the UofA so that they have a piece of campus to take with them wherever life takes them after graduation. The UofA is strongly rooted in its traditions and proud of them-- from the Hog Call to Senior Walk. These traditions are a hallmark of a student's experience as a Razorback. That is why this year's theme is On The Hill: Then and Now. With this book we wanted to show where our campus traditions came from, while documenting the students creating new ones. Throughout the pages of the book, you'll find stories of our students leaving their mark on the UofA by organizing protests, running million-dollar businesses and winning national titles. You will also see pages that show the history behind campus landmarks, organizations and traditions.

This book would not have been possible without the hard work of the 2018 Razorback staff. Our team of writers, photographers and designers spent countless hours to make this book. Countless hours of our writers interviewing students and finding that perfect word. Countless hours of our photographers trying to get that perfect snapshot. And countless hours of our designers weaving the stories and photos together to tell the story of the students. Thank you all. I was inspired everyday by your dedication to making the Razorback the best it can be. I also want to thank Madison Landry, design editor, and Jordan Tyler, copy editor. Thank you for workshopping ideas with me, working long hours and painstakingly editing each page.

I hope you enjoy the 2018 Razorback.

Emily

Madison Landry Design Editor

Being a part of the Razorback staff has been something I have been proud to be a part of for the last four years. Getting to work with all of our created, talented and dedicated staff members kept me coming back. I'm glad that Emily, Jordan, and I got to leave our mark on the university by giving a glimpse into our time here in the 2017-2018 year. Thank you to all of my designers for inspiring new ideas and never being afraid of blank page. Thank you to all of the photographers for truly capturing the best visual images of this year. And thank you to the writers who told all of the stories near and far that truly defined what it meant to be a Razorback. While I'm excited to not stare at the computer screen for hours on end, I will miss the memories and laughter we shared in our staff room.

Here's to a heavy book that will forever hold our memories in history!

Madison

COLOPHON

The 2018 Razorback yearbook is the official yearbook of the University of Arkansas and was entirely created by students. The 120st volume of the Razorback was printed on 157-gsm/ 106# China Sun Matte paper by Multimedia Technology, Metairie, La. The book was produced in the USA and printed in China.

The staff worked with company representative Matthew Bourgeois. The 260-page books were printed with 4-color processing. The pages were created using Adobe Creative Suite 7 on iMacs. Photos were taken by student photographers using their own personal Nikon and Canon cameras.

The Razorback was a fall delivery book, meaning it contained the events that occurred in the fall and spring semester of the 2017-2018 academic year. The yearbook was handed out at different locations across campus on a first-come, first-serve basis, unless previously reserved. The yearbook was made possible through the Student Media Fee.

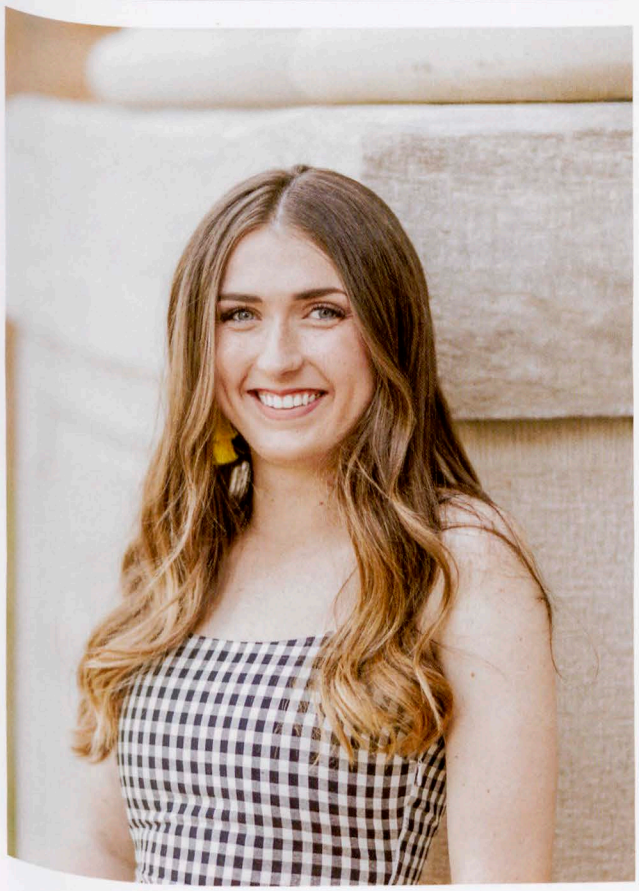

The cover was designed by Multimedia Technology. Page and templates were created by Madison Landry, Emily Thompson, Megan Wilson, Deja Snyder, Bryan Murren and Hannah Reiner.

Special thank you to Cheri Freeland, Robyn Ledbetter and Rob Wells for their guidance and continual support of the Razorback.

The student portraits were taken by student photographers. Some of the student organization photos were also taken by student photographers and some were provided by the student organizations themselves.

Some of the sports photos were submitted by the U of A Athletics Department. The historical photos of campus on pages 10, 84 and 138 are from the U of A Speical Collections' Shared History photo collection.

The Razorback is a member of the Associated Collegiate Press Association and Arkansas College Media Association.

Jordan Tyler Copy Editor

This book is the result of endless hours of hard work and care from our staff writers, designers and photographers, and it could not have been made without the willingness of our campus community to share their stories with us. Working alongside Madison and Emily to pull it all together taught me valuable professional skills and, most importantly, how to overcome obstacles, come together and deliver a finished product we can all be proud of.

I'm so grateful for the opportunity to be a part of student media and the yearbook, and to help the 2017-2018 school year at the University of Arkansas go down in history.
